Five killed themselves in New York on Christmas Day, five desperate foolish ones who did not realize that death and the grave are close enough to us. Two jumped: one, a woman, took poison; one shot himself; one hanged himself.

In Yonkers, a New York suburb, died John Andrus, called the "millionaire straphanger." Ninety-three years old, he was wise and unwise.

Mr. Andrus was supposed to have more than one million dollars for each of his ninety-three years. The wisdom of that accumulation depends on the use he made of it.

He said, always, "I buy, but never sell, real estate. I just lease it." He knew there is only so much of this earth's surface, and not even Wall Street could issue more than four corners of 57th street and Park avenue, New York city.

Also, he said, "I never put a mortgage on anything. Anybody with any sense can make money, and I never borrowed a dollar from a bank."

All that is wisdom.

But Mr. Andrus worked every day until death came for him, when he was ninety-three. He did not allow himself a few years or even one year, at the end, to look at the sky and the stars, and question and wonder.

A wise old gentleman in practical ways, he was in a higher way not more wise than the 400-year-old turtle of the Galapagos islands.

King George, talking on the radio like our President, says the British Empire must overcome its anxieties "in a spirit of one family." Queen Mary, the Prince of Wales, the newly married Duke and Duchess of Kent, and other royalties sat in an adjoining room hearing the King's speech in a loud speaker as the microphone carried it to the rest of the British Empire.

"One family" is a good idea, but it is hard for the lowly farmer in Canada's Northwest, the South African Briton with his problems, the Australian living on the rim of his great island, to feel real brotherhood with the young Briton in Bond street, with top hat and single eye glass.

They are "one family" politically and in the map's red color, not otherwise.

While Americans try to drive Karl Marx, Lenin and Bolshevism generally, from colleges and public schools, Russia's government tries to drive all other teaching from Bolshevik schools.

Russia complains that "opportunist" teachers and lecturers are encouraging Russian youth to think that there might be in the world a wisdom other than that of Karl Marx and Lenin. It will amuse some who knew Trotzky to learn that Russia complains of "Trotzky conservatism" taught to Russian children.

Russia again tried to make of Christmas "just one day in three hundred and sixty-five," but it cannot be done. The young, taught atheism from early childhood, may have scoffed at the "Bourgeois" Christian superstition. But in the hearts of more than a hundred million Russian peasants there was a picture of the Child lying in the manger, and a prayer to Him on their lips.

Many Christmas presents for the Dionne quintuplets, including mittens knitted by Mrs. Mary Ferguson McIntyre, of Dalhousie Lake, who is 101 years old. Tomorrow the quintuplets will be seven months old.

Fathers are not important, but John D. Sloan, 61, formerly a coal miner at Kona, Ky., deserves mention. His thirty-fifth child was born on Christmas Day. Mr. Sloan, married three times, has one set of triplets, two sets of twins, his first wife had twelve children; his second wife, fifteen; the mother of little number thirty-five has

3 Dead in Gale Here

Cold Wave Grips N. E.

DAMAGE MOUNTS AS TREES, WIRES FALL IN "BIG WIND"

66 Miles an Hour!

Three dead in Boston in gale that reached velocity of 66 miles an hour.

Mercury drops 38 degrees in 18 hours.

Planes grounded, buses off schedule.

Fears felt for fishing boats as liners struggle to make port.

Wires, poles felled by wind.

In the wake of a howling gale that took three lives and caused untold damage, Boston and New England suffered in the grip of a cold wave today that tumbled the mercury 38 degrees in 18 hours.

Northwest winds that were officially recorded at a maximum of 66 miles an hour still blew hard from the same quarter today, but had subsided to 27 miles an hour at noon.

At 9 a. m. the thermometer at the federal building showed an official reading of 11 above zero, a drop from 49 above that was recorded at 3 yesterday afternoon. At noon it was 16.

The weather man recalled last year at this time it was 4 above and slightly under 10 inches of snow were on the ground.

In his forecast for tonight and tomorrow, he predicted a rise in temperatures to the 15 or 18 mark as the coldest with a marked let down in the winds from north to northwest. Snow flurries may fall tomorrow, he added.

Stillario Stavolta, 53, of 152 Beach street, Waverley, a barber, died in Cambridge Hospital today, the third victim of the gale. He collapsed from over-exertion after he boarded a street car in Belmont.

The other victims were Mrs. Cora B. Bartlett of the South End, who died on the doorsteps of her son's house in Wakefield, and Peter Gladsea, 26, of Chicago, who was blown from the gangplank of the steamer J. J. Christenson at Mystic docks in Charlestown and drowned.

The fire was discovered at 6 o'clock by Patrolman Patrick McGrath in the cellar of Cole's Drug store. The Blaze spread to a chain shoe store and a small department store on the street floor.

Offices of Dr. Clayton Walker and Dr. Ralph Estey, dentists, the Boston Musical School, the piano studio of Anthony Cushman and the Elm Beauty Shop were damaged on the second floor.

N. H. HOTEL FIRE! 20 FLEE FLAMES

Store, Homes Burn

By Associated Press

Ashland, N. H., Dec. 27—Fire today levelled the 50-room Squam Lake Hotel, the hotel annex housing a drug store, the hotel garage, and two residences in the business district, causing damage estimated at $100,000 by Fire Chief Carl Crowley.

The fire, firemen said, started in the hotel garage at 4 a. m. It was not under control until 9.

Twenty guests of the hotel were driven out in sub freezing temperatures, along with several occupants of the residences. None were injured.

Firemen from four neighboring communities, and 100 employes of two factories in Ashland, along with the Ashland fire department fought the blaze, which, swept by a strong east wind, threatened to wipe out the business district.

The wind eventually served to save the entire town, blowing embers away from the thickly populated section.

Departments from Holderness, Plymouth, Laconia and Bristol manned fire pumps alternately as others, assisted by volunteers, directed water lines into the flaming buildings.

The drug store, owned by Roscoe M. Whitcomb, was one of the largest north of Concord. The residences destroyed were the Doan estate, a dwelling occupied by Beatrice Peavey and her sister, and a two-family dwelling owned by Frank Perkins.

Three automobiles in the hotel garage were destroyed.

She is Miss Margaret Simpson, 24, a clerk in his office for the past two years. She succeeds James Burke, resigned. Her place was filled by appointment of Parcy Lane, former newspaperman.

Miss Simpson is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Simpson of 156 Granite street. Her father is pastor of the Swedish Methodist church. She was born in India, where her parents were missionaries, and was educated in New York and Worcester schools.

Libby's Son Accepts 7 Million

By Associated Press

Winston-Salem, N. C., Dec. 27 — Counsel for Christopher Reynolds, posthumous son of Smith Reynolds, today filed formal notice of acceptance of a proposed settlement of the tobacco fortune heir's estate under which he would receive $7,000,000.

The acceptance was filed by R. C. Vaughn as "next friend" of the infant son of Libby Holman Reynolds. The proposal in question was made by the surviving heirs of R. J. Reynolds, founder of the vast cigarette industry bearing his name, and approved by the Cabarrus Bank & Trust Co., co-guardian of Anne Cannon Reynolds, 2nd, Smith Reynolds' daughter by his first marriage to young Anne Cannon, member of the wealthy Concord and Annapolis textile manufacturing family.

Under its terms little Anne would receive $9,000,000, minus a $2,000,000 "release" settlement made at the time her mother obtained a Reno divorce. Libby Holman's son would receive $7,000,000, Libby herself would receive $750,000 and the balance, about $9,000,000, would go to a brother and two sisters of Smith Reynolds, with the understanding it would be used to establish a charitable foundation.

ENGINE BLAST! 13 DEAD, 43 HURT

TENDER BLOWN INTO HOUSE

BOILER LANDS IN PASSENGER COACH

By Associated Press

Powelton, W. Va., Dec. 27—The locomotive of a four-coach train taking miners to work exploded in this little valley settlement today killing at least 13 men and injuring 43, some of whom are said to be dying.

The blast occurred just after the train stopped to pick up the last of the workers before moving out of the valley to the mine of the Elkhorn Piney Coal Company.

The boiler was blown into the air and landed in the middle of the first coach in which the men who were killed had been riding.

Of such proportions was the blast that the engine cab was blown through a small house beside the track and narrowly missed a mother and two sleeping children.

The body of William M. Blankenship, 52, the engineer, was tossed 263 feet, that of Delmar L. Oxley, 25, was hurled to the bed of a nearby creek.

Some passengers also were hurled several hundred feet away, and many were cut by the debris.

One man still is missing and officials said they fear he was buried under the debris.

C. R. Stahl, division superintendent of the coal company, owners of the train, said the blast was caused by the top of the firebox buckling and pulling loose the boiler tubes.

The dead and injured were rushed to a hospital in Montgomery, 11 miles away.

The train was carrying 300 miners at the time of the blast. Within an hour after the blast the streets in front of the hospital were filled with men, women and children looking for their loved ones.

TWO WEEKS OF TERROR

LONDON PAPER TELLS OF NEW NAZI DRIVE

By International News Service

London, Dec. 27—Two reports, possibly from the same source, stating that another Nazi "blood purge" had taken place in Germany appeared in London today.

Two hundred thirty storm troops and special blackshirt guard leaders were arrested and executed during the first two weeks of December, according to a story in the Prague, Czechoslovakia, "Weltbuhne," and quoted in a Reuter telegram from Paris.

The second account also came through Paris, and was splashed over three columns in the London Daily Herald, a Socialist, anti-Fascist newspaper.

The Herald asserted that Major Walter Buch, allegedly acting for General Hermann Goering, head the Reich secret police, conducted the purge, with Chancellor Hitler remaining in the background.

Among those executed were the recently deposed Governor H. Bruckner of Silesia, according to the London paper. It was stated that Heinrich Himmler, leader of the "SS" (guard troops), had been deposed, but it was unknown whether he was executed

Seventy-seven, by Hitler's own announcement, died in the purge of June 30.

FISH Found Sane

By International News Service

White Plains, N. Y., Dec. 27—Albert Howard Fish, confessed slayer of little Grace Budd, is sane and able to stand trial, according to an alienist's report filed today.

Chief Assistant District Attorney Walter A. Ferris, who disclosed the alienist's findings, said it would "be improper" to make public full contents of the report.

Fish will probably be arraigned early in January to plead to a first degree murder indictment and is expected to be tried in the February court term.

UNPAID RACE BOARD BILL FILED

A move to abolish the present state racing commission and substitute an unpaid corporation of five members appointed by the governor, was filed in the State House today by Mayor Robert E. Greenwood of Fitchburg.

Mayor Greenwood listed five ways in which the profits of pari-mutuel machines would be expended, including a provision to distribute the proceeds each year to cities and towns for old age assistance and public welfare.

The corporation would be authorized to issue stocks and bonds up to an amount of $5,000,000, the par value of each share being $100, and no one person entitled to more than 500 shares. Dividends, according to the bill, would be paid at the rate of 6 per cent annually.

The other four stipulations set forth by Mayor Greenwood for disposition of the funds were payment of all reasonable and proper expenses of the corporation and its employes; the creation of a reserve to provide for any unforeseen contingencies, such a reserve not to exceed 5 per cent of the gross receipts for any one calendar year; and a fund of 25 per cent to be set aside each year for retirement of the stocks and bonds.

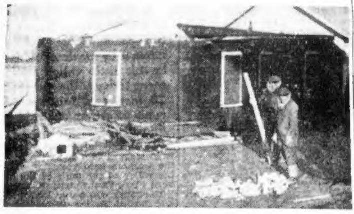
GALE HUFFS AND PUFFS; BLOWS HOUSES DOWN

Even parked automobiles weren't safe from the destructiveness of Boston's record-breaking December gale. This car became a wind "casualty" when it was half buried in bricks blown from a rooftop at Shawmut avenue and Springfield street, South End.

This wasn't exactly a house built on sand, for it stood on a solid foundation of piles in May street, Nantasket beach. Nevertheless, the gale picked it up bodily and dropped it into the Atlantic ocean. Low tide left it beached, as it is now. The cottage is owned by Esther Olson, now in California.



For all his huffing and puffing, Mr. Boreas couldn't blow this house completely down. So he did his next best. He blew the roof off. The building stands in Bay street, Nantasket beach. It is owned by Mary Trainor of Boston. (Pictures by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

SALUTE

INAUGURAL IN ONE WEEK

THEN ELY TAKES WALK ALONE DOWN STEPS

Governor-elect Curley will be inaugurated next Thursday to the roar of 19 guns, two more than has ever been accorded at any previous inaugural.

He is the first chief executive to be sworn in since President Roosevelt changed the salute for a governor from 17 to 19 guns.

Immediately previous, the Governor-elect, surrounded by his military staff, incoming state officials and the executive council, will march to the House chamber where the legislature will sit in joint convention.

As the presiding officer, President Erland F. Fish of the Senate starts to administer the oath to the new Governor, the retiring chief executive, Governor Ely, will leave the executive office and walk out of the building, in accordance with custom, alone down the front steps to Beacon street.

Governor Curley will launch into his inaugural message, which it is understood, will take the better part of an hour to deliver.

Pomp and ceremony will be the order of the day with the bright uniforms of military aides, foreign consuls, army and navy officials, making a striking contrast with the somber black of the justices of the supreme and superior courts.

Reception Follows

In the Speaker's gallery will be Miss Mary Curley, new First Lady of the state, surrounded by her close friends.

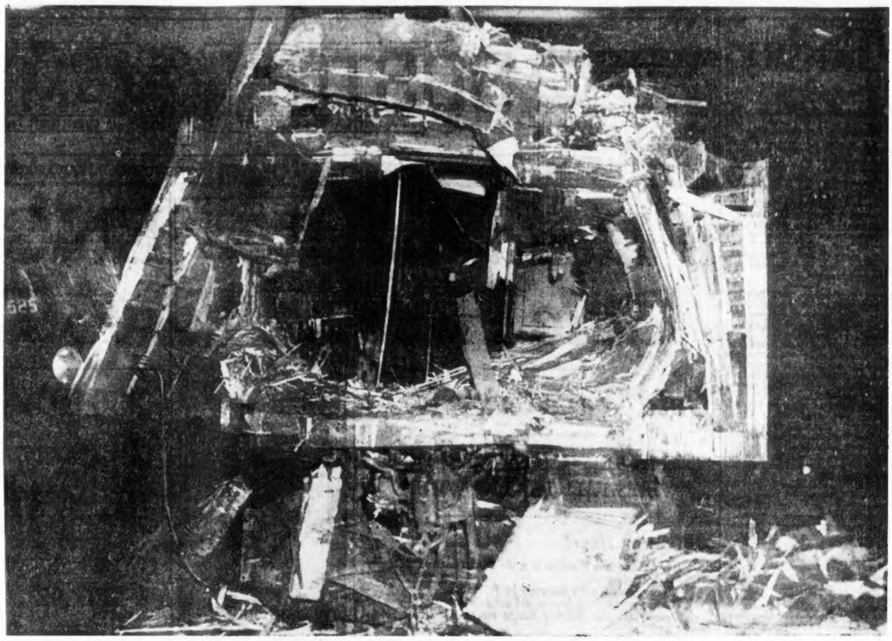
After the ceremony in the House the governor is escorted to the Hall of Flags for his first reception.

In the transfer of the reins of office, Governor Ely will turn over to his successor, among other things, a gavel and box made from the wood of the Constitution when that vessel was reconditioned at the Boston Navy Yard in 1906.

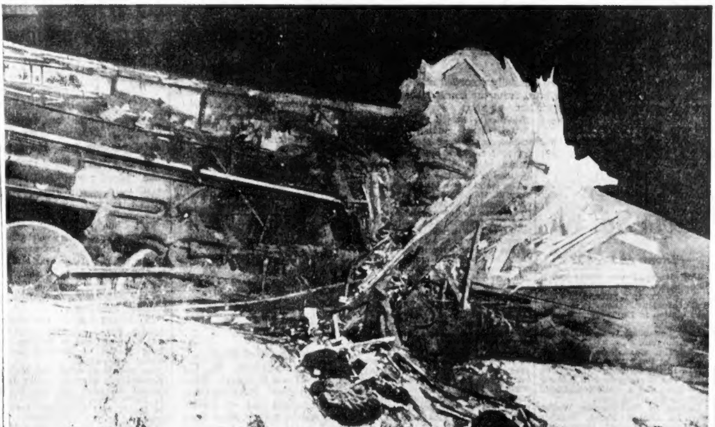
Also a wooden plaque containing three Indian arrow heads and a sharpening stone which was excavated on the estate of Captain Robert A. Hammond of East Sandwich from the Indian fort at Scorton Heights.

Where 15 Died in Excursion Train Crash

Coaches Crumple as Express Locomotive Plunges Into Them



This is the rear of the wooden excursion coach which was rammed by a express locomotive in Hamilton, Ont., on the Canadian National R. R. line between Detroit and Toronto. The terrific impact killed 15 passengers and injured scores of others.



The camera tells the story better than it can be told in words. Loaded passenger coaches standing on a Canadian National R. R. siding in Hamilton, Ont. A speeding locomotive hauling the gilt-edged Detroit-Toronto express. Switches set wrong or signals mixed. No time for the engineer to stop. A few scant seconds to cut the express Pullmans loose. Then the crash! The locomotive's nose ramming itself deep into the standing cars. Hissing steam and screams of the injured. An early total of 15 dead. A score of others in critical condition in hospitals. One more Christmas day tragedy! (Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

THREE DIE AS GALE SWEEPS NEW ENGLAND

of the Church of the Most Precious Blood, Hyde Park, today was a menace to traffic and pedestrians. Fearing that it might fall, the police roped off a section of the street.

SNOW IN NORTH

Many parts of New England were blanketed in snow or sheeted with ice that formed when the driving rain froze as it hit the ground. From the northern counties of Maine, like Aroostook, Franklin and Piscataquis, snow as deep as a foot had fallen.

The west which had felt the full force of the storm that reached here 24 hours before, was compiling a casualty list that, with accidents and deaths from exposure is expected to mount well over 200.

So bad were conditions in New England that all airplane traffic was halted and in the western parts of Massachusetts and in northern sections as well, bus line schedules were either cancelled or so disrupted that pasengers were transferred to trains.

SIGNS TUMBLE

oBston's buildings and the buildings and homes in its environs were hard hit. Scores of signs were ripped from their hangings and blown down into streets.

One of the most spectacular of these accidents was in Washington street in downtown Boston, where two women were hit by a huge sign that plunged two stories.

Most pathetic of the storm casualties was that of Mrs. Cora B. Bartlett of the South End, who was visiting a son in Wakefield, and, starting for a trolley home, encountered the full force of the gale.

The woman, 58, battled valiantly, but finally turned back. She reached the doorsteps of the house she had left, collapsed and died from the exertion and exposure.

SAILOR DROWNS

The other death came in a freak fashion that was repeated, but in the second case the victim survived, though he is dying.

Peter Gladsea, a 26-year-old Chicago man, who worked as a deckhand aboard the S.S. Jane Christensen, was blown off a gangplank into the harbor and drowned when he was making his way aboard ship from the Mystic Docks. The Christensen tied up there Christmas Day.

At Commonwealth Pier, the same fate befell Peter Carr, a Gloucester fisherman, who was walking along the pier when he was lifted from his feet and tossed into the water.

The man was dragged out and taken to Boston City Hospital.

The wind, at the height of its power, tore completely from its foundations a two-story unoccupied dwelling in Second Bay street, Nantasket.

The crash crossed electric wires and in a moment the wreckage was in flames.

Two huge coal towers at the Tidewater Coal Company in East Boston, weighing from 80 to 100 tons each, were blown right into the ocean causing a loss estimated at $30,000.

MARVELOUS ESCAPES

Patrolman William J. Shea, 35, of Watertown, had a close squeak with death in one of the freakiest accidents of the entire storm.

He was patrolling a School street beat in Watertown when the overhead electric light wires came crashing down and felled him.

The live wire hit the badge on his uniform coat and melted it. At the same time, between the impetus of the debris and the force of the wind, the patrolman was hurled some 40 feet and over a hedge.

The left wall and about 25 feet of the roof was ripped off a three-story brick building at 512 Shawmut avenue, South End. Most of the wreckage landed on a parked automobile belonging to Louis Bersner of Blue Hill avenue, Mattapan. There wasn't much automobile left.

Three workmen narrowly escaped when a plate glass window was blown out of the old Ford building at the Cambridge end of Cottage Farm bridge. They were boarding up one window, which had blown out.

Chimneys on the Cambridge Trust Company, 1336 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, the police building in Harvard square, at 267 Brookline street and at 773 Main street, all Cambridge, fell before the gale.

Other Cambridge damage included the crash of chain store windows at 174 Hampshire street, 10 Central square and at Massachusetts and Ellery streets.

Boston's municipal Christmas tree didn't escape, either. The top, for a length of eight feet was flung away in the wind, carrying lights and wires.

NEW YORKER IN FIGHT

COMMUNISM TAUGHT IN U. S., HE AVERS

By Universal Service

Washington, Dec. 27—Representative Hamilton Fish (R.), of New York, today called upon American parents to rise and protest against the "rising tide" of Communist propaganda in schools and colleges.

Communistic and socialistic preaching and activity are more intensive in both men's and women's colleges than in any other sphere, he said.

American colleges are filled with radical instructors, he declared, explaining:

"There is a greater number of Communists and left-wing Socialists within the colleges and universities than can be found in any other walk of life."

Fish promised to press for legislation aimed at stamping out "red" doctrine in line with a report he drew when chairman of the special House committee investigating the topic.

The committee, headed by Representative McCormack (D) of Massachusetts, investigating un-American activities, meanwhile is preparing its report to be submitted early in the session. The committee will hold a concluding hearing Saturday, according to present plans.

Fish declared "pink intellectuals and radical college professors" are spreading the seeds of class hatred and denouncing the free institutions of the country.

He demanded each professor be required to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and said:

False Doctrines

"These professors, without any practical experience in government, delight in making out that everything is wrong, rotten and corrupt in America, that labor is brutalized and exploited, whereas everything is beautiful, peaceful and prosperous in Soviet Russia.

"These false doctrines and un-American propaganda constantly repeated by Socialistic and Communist professors are making inroads on the minds of thousands of young, susceptible students who are never given the other side of the picture—that American labor is the freest and the best compensated in the world.

"It is an outrage that parents, who have made their money under our economic and industrial systems, based upon private initiative and reasonable profits, and have saved enough money to send their children to schools and colleges do so only to have them taught subversive doctrines.

"The time has come for parents to protest against such un-American practices and to demand that all instructors of youth, including those in the public schools, be required to take an oath to uphold and defend our free institutions and the Constitution of the United States.

"There is no reason whatever why colleges and universities and public schools should constantly be inviting Socialists and Communists and other radical spokesmen to use their platform for subversive principles and to incite class hatred among the oncoming American generation."

FOUND! Radicals "PINK"

NEW PRODUCT OF DEPRESSION

DEVELOPED IN COLLEGES, SAY EDUCATORS

By Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Dec. 27—A new class of radicals, at least "parlor pink" ones, has been built up among American college and high school students by the depression, two educators today told the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

There was a "large and significant" increase in liberal attitudes toward social problems among students in 1933-1934 as compared with the early-depression years of 1931-1932, according to Dr. C. L. Morgan and Dr. H. H. Remmers of Purdue University.

College co-eds, they found, were slightly more liberal even than college boys.

Many students probably would be in favor of some radical steps beyond the present scope of the new deal, the educators said, including government ownership of railroads, public regulation of business and heavy taxation of large fortunes and incomes.

MARRIES ACTOR AFTER PARTY

GROOM TO GIVE CAREER UP FOR HOME

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER
Universal Service Society Editor

New York, Dec. 27—In a Christmas night elopement, Anne Gould, vivacious young society beauty, and Frank Spencer Meador, young actor from Texas, were married by a police judge in Harrison, N. Y. Details were learned today.

And to put an original twist to an old post-matrimonial story, this time the bridegroom, not the bride, will give up a career in the theater. He will take the great-granddaughter of the famous Jay Gould back to Texas to make a home.

A dinner attended by a group of gay young folk was the scene of the inspiration to mingle wedding bells and Christmas bells. The party packed itself into an automobile and hurried off to Harrison, where they found Judge Leo Mintzer willing to tie the bridal knot.

Then the new Mrs. Meador telephoned her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Gould, at their home at the Ritz-Carlton to announce she was on her way home—with a husband.

There were some moments of trepidation in the Gould home while the arrival of the newlyweds was awaited. But once the youngsters arrived, Mrs. Gould immediately recognized the "nice young man" she had met before who now was a member of the family, and quickly extended parental blessings.

A ruby engagement ring and a diamond wedding band on Anne's finger inclined Mrs. Gould to the belief the wedding was not as sudden as might appear at first sight. At least there had been some foresight on young Meador's part, if not a secret engagement.

FRANK SPENCER MEADOR MRS. ANNE GOULD MEADOR

His own promising stage and film career will go into the discard, if necessary, to make happy his surprise marriage to the former Miss Anne Gould, daughter of the wealthy and socially prominent Jay Gould family, says bridegroom Frank Spencer Meador, shown above with his brand new young wife. The wedding took place in Harrison, N. Y. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

Eagle Club License Ban Made Known in Nahant

The Eagle Auto Club of Nahant, where police said Attorney James P. Mahoney had been drinking shortly before he shot himself December 18, will not be granted a license to sell liquor in 1935, according to a decision of the Nahant Board of Selectmen.

Mrs. Miriam G. Mahoney of Swampscott, widow of the dead attorney, filed a petition in Essex Probate Court asking that she be named administratrix of his estate, estimated at $3000.

Manuel Lipson of Boston has been appointed to fill the position Mahoney held as trustee in the bankruptcy case of a Lynn dry goods company.

The Nahant selectmen, in addition to voting to refuse a new license to the Eagle club, changed the deadline for selling liquor from 2 o'clock in the morning to midnight.

COLLEGE PAPER EDITORS MEET

Washington, Dec. 27—Editors of 37 college dailies from every corner of the nation and Canada were converging on the capital today to found a permanent undergraduate editorial association.

They plan to exchange ideas, map a program for militant defense of freedom of the collegiate press and bring undergraduate America into a more compact unit.

A specific case involving the freedom of the collegiate press issue to be considered is that involving "The Reveille," Louisiana State University bi-weekly which Senator Huey Long of Louisiana recently attempted to suppress.

Jesse H. Cutrer, editor of the paper, it was announced today, will arrive by plane tomorrow morning to present the L. S. U. students' side of this controversy. Long also has been invited to give his side, but no reply has been received to the invitation.

The opening session tomorrow will mark the first nation-wide meeting of editors of college dailies in this country.

Interior Secretary Ickes, a former editor of the Maroon, daily publication of the University of Chicago, will address the group. Others equally prominent in public life are expected to be among the speakers.

Included in the vanguard arriving yesterday were Stan Beaubaire, editor of the Stanford Daily, Stanford University; Benjamin Lieberman, editor of the Daily Illini, University of Illinois; Walter Christie, Jr., editor of the Daily California, University of California; and Charles Bernhard, editor of the Daily Cardinal, University of Wisconsin. Beaubaire, moving spirit of the meeting, is expected to serve as chairman.

During the day and a half they will be here, members of the Big Ten Editorial Association, up to this time the only organized group of college editors, will meet.

The group will depart at noon Saturday for New York, where they will be guests at dinner in the Ritz Tower and spend the week-end. There they will be addressed by some of the most outstanding figures of the newspaper profession.

SCIENTISTS HEAR TWO METHODS OF HALTING EPIDEMICS

By LEIGH MATTESON
International News Service Science Writer

Pittsburgh, Dec. 27—Science now is ready for the first time in history to combat infantile paralysis actively during any epidemic that may develop.

Two slightly different methods of vaccinating and immunizing children and adults against the disease, which cripples from 20 to 45 per cent of its victims, when it does not kill them, were described today at the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The scientists which heard the physicians outline their preventative methods had it well in mind that President Roosevelt is the most eminent current victim of the crippling effects of the disease.

The discoverers of the methods were Dr. Maurice Brodie, assistant professor of bacteriology, New York Hospital and Bellevue Hospital medical school, and Professor John A. Kolmer of the Temple University medical school, Philadelphia.

The serum they use in the immunization treatment is obtained from the common East Indian or Rhesus monkey. It is obtained from the pulverized spinal cords of monkeys which have been infected with an attenuated, or mild, form of monkey infantile paralysis.

The serum is obtained from the monkeys when they are actively ill with the disease. Injection of the serum, in properly diluted quantities, confers on human beings what is probably a permanent, active immunity, as contrasted with the temporary passive immunity which resulted when serum from convalescent monkeys was used.

Dr. Kolmer injected 18 monkeys with the living virus containing 4 per cent emulsions of spinal cord in 1 per cent solutions of sodium ricinoleate. The immunization was complete.

Dr. Kolmer then accomplished successful vaccination of himself, his woman assistant, his own two young sons and 23 other children. No ill effects were observed.

A check of the blood of the vaccinated humans revealed the treatment had produced an increase of the disease-fighting substances known as anti-bodies, which ward off contagious diseases.

"I believe," Dr. Kolmer announced, "that a vaccine now is available for safe and effective immunization and especially for trial in an epidemic."

Dr. Brodie's treatment is similar except that the serum is injected in a diluted solution of formalin, a chemical different in reaction from ricinoleate.

Dr. Brodie said he had tested the vaccine on 35 children and six adult volunteers at the Bureau of Health laboratories, New York City.

"These were carefully observed," he reported, "for local and general reactions and temperatures were recorded four times daily. In no instance was there any nervous response or untoward effect."

Ear in Tail

Pittsburgh, Dec. 27 (AP)—The moth thyatirida has an ear at the end of its tail, the American Association for the Advancement of Science was told by Dr. William T. M. Forbes, Cornell University.

Why, no one knows. But thyatirida doesn't know the proper place for ears anyhow, because his normal ones are at the base of his neck.

Engine Operated by Sun Shown

Pittsburgh, Dec. 27—A solar heat collector capable of supplying heat for cooking or drivini a small engine, was displayed by its inventor, Dr. C. G. Abbot of Smithsonian Institution, at the science exhibition of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at the Mellon Institute.

Dr. Abbot's sun-heat collecting setup consists of a novel kind of mirror, built up of tiny individual mirrors set in a concave frame. This surface reflects sunlight and brings it to a focus at a vessel filled with b lask oil.

The oil absorbs the sun's heat and light. It is so thoroughly insulated by vacuum jackets that in 20 minutes the temperature of the oil rises to nearly 400 degrees Fahrenheit. Led into a reservoir, the heated oil becomes the source for cooking or engine operating.

Booze 'Boss' Plaint

A charge that a beer salesman residing outside the city completely dominated the liquor traffic was made today by Representative Louis N. M. DesChenes, chairman of the Fitchburg Licensing Board, at a hearing before the ABC Commission.

Representative DesChenes opposed the granting of six licenses to Fitchburg applicants. He said that the salesmen, whose name he said he would reveal later, "had a hold on the police," and blocked those who would not purchase his products.

Rites For Society Suicide

Funeral services for Henry M. Bohlen, of 90 Commonwealth avenue, Back Bay, who committed suicide with a shotgun Christmas Day, will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Mt. Auburn cemetery chapel, Cambridge.

The Rev. William E. Gardner, of Trinity Church, will officiate. The funeral will be private.

Dr. George Burgess Magrath, medical examiner, who declared the death a suicide, said Bohlen's death was caused by despondency over his financial affairs, his health, and his divorce from the former Miss Margaret Curtis.

DOLE, BONUS, NRA IN MESSAGE BY ROOSEVELT

By Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 27—The session of Congress opening next Thursday will, in the opinion of some Democratic leaders, see three major debates—over relief, the cash bonus and NRA.

They see other headline disputes in the making, too, notably inflation, methods of handling unemployment insurance and other social security measures, and possibly the world court, but they said today the first three are uppermost in their minds now.

While these leaders, who do not wish just yet to be quoted by name, sought to read the future and prepare for it, President Roosevelt continued work on the message he will deliver Jan. 4. Some persons close to the White House described it as largely a "middle ground" document.

Cabinet officers and other high officials were to confer with him today or tomorrow.

How many issues the message will deal with is not known, but most observers believe relief and the future of NRA will be included. Whether the President would have some suggestion to make on the soldier's bonus—perhaps in a later message—was a subject causing speculation.

Dole Vs. Work

As for relief, the size of the spending and the question of dole vs. made-work are considered leading problems. In recent months, administration leaders have shown signs of favoring a swing to work relief.

Unofficial talk of possible public works appropriations has ranged as high as $6,000,000,000, but some men prominent in Congress say privately they look for a request for not more than $3,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000.

Advocates of immediate payment of the $2,200,000,000 bonus claim enough support to pass it even over a Presidential veto, but opponents are saying, it can be stopped in the Senate.

Whether a compromise, such as payments to distressed ex-soldiers, may be agreed upon only the future can determine.

HIJACK TRUCK FOUND

GUNMEN HUNTED

Stripped of its load of leather valued at $10,000, a truck stolen by hi-jackers after the driver had been kidnaped in Albany street, last night, was found abandoned in Dexter street, at the Somerville-Medford line early today by police.

Meanwhile, a search was being made for two gunmen who held up Joseph Wilosky, the driver, took him for a ride to Weston and dumped him in a lonely spot, while they drove away with the truck.

State police watched highways for the big red truck and trailer until it was reported found in Dexter street.

The kidnaped driver was released from the vehicle in Weston.

IN MAYBERRY HEARING

LAWYERS CLASH OVER NEW ANGLES

Charges that a witness was intoxicated when he testified at a preliminary hearing against Attorney Lowell A. Mayberry startled spectators in Supreme Court today at the second hearing on disbarment proceedings against the wealthy State street attorney.

They came out of testimony by Police Inspector Francis J. Haggerty, once assigned to aid investigations into the activities of lawyers by the Massachusetts Claims Investigating Committee.

Inspector Haggerty named the witness as John C. Nolan, who testified at Mayberry's present hearing only a week ago concerning alleged jury fixing.

Judge Henry T. Lummus, presiding over the hearing, inquired of Inspector Haggerty where the alleged drunkenness of Nolan was noticed. The police official replied that it was during questioning of Nolan before the investigating commission.

"How did you know he was intoxicated?" pressed Judge Lummus, "did he stagger?"

"No, he didn't stagger but he was vague and incoherent. He was plainly intoxicated," was the reply.

Today's hearing also included testimony from Attorney John A. McArdle, who was reported missing during the first of the hearing. He said he was an investigator for insurance companies before he passed the bar and that he became connected with the investigating commission through a "Mr. Swift, who is connected with insurance interests."

Sharp clashes between witnesses and attorneys also marked today's hearing.

These came during questioning by Attorney Samuel Hoar, chief of the Mayberry defense, of Police Inspector Francis Haggerty and Attorney Eugene Sullivan, who was summoned by the defense. Inspector Haggerty aided the commission in its investigations.

Attorney Sullivan shouted denials to questions as to whether he had visited the claims commission office with one of the three men who, according to the defense, were paid a bonus for "getting" Mayberry.

Reports still persisted in the courthouse today that a surprise witness is due to be called by the Mayberry defense.

In the depths of the catacombs in Rome, early Christians took refuge, and there, with the heavy ground above them, prayed, preached, sang, comforted each other, with not a sound heard.

Suppose you had said to them, "Some day a bishop of our church will preach here underground and his voice will be heard all over Italy, all over Europe, and throughout the known world?"

That happened on Christmas Day when the Catholic Bishop Joseph F. Busch, of Minnesota, spoke in the catacombs of San Domitilla.

As we are about to let go the Philippine Islands, feeling too feeble or two sentimental to hold them, after spending millions, the islands are found to be "the most important source of war material under the American flag."

Conservative engineers say chromite deposits in Zambales Province are among the most important in the world and the most valuable we possess.

The Japanese, who will step in as we step out, will find all that very useful. And wise Japan will not first spend millions improving the islands and then turn them loose.

Mayor La Guardia, of New York, believes in putting his hand to the plow and going straight ahead. His first municipally-owned power plant will light the city's terminal market in the Bronx, and sell electricity to the neighborhood.

This means vigorous, perhaps destructive, competition with New York's privately-owned plant, in which more than a thousand million dollars have been invested.

There may be a fight about that.

STORM VICTIM

RETURNS ON BOAT

Aboard the ice-covered fishing trawler Notre Dame, an injured fisherman was carried into port today to reveal a Christmas Day drama of the storm-tossed fishing banks.

John Johnson, 35, was the man in the bunk. On one leg was an improvised splint, fashioned at sea by Captain John Masted after Johnson broke his leg off Nova Scotia when a heavy trawl became dislodged. It pinned his leg to the deck when it fell.

Taken to Chelsea Marine Hospital, Dr. Stephen DeMartini said the leg was set perfectly and gave high praise to Captain Masted.

No Drinking in Back Room Store Doesn't Have One

Police told the Licensing Board today that in Nathan Swartzman's delicatessen in Morton street, Dorchester, nobody can see what the boys in the back room are having because there isn't any back room.

They were perturbed and confused at not finding any back room after one woman had complained that her husband was getting so drunk there that he had to sleep there and another had complained that her 17-year-old boy was drinking in the back room.

The police turned the complaints over to the licensing board before investigating the premises and their later scrutiny of the place led to the belief that some other store is referred to.

They asked more time to find a back room in the neighborhood before decision for or against Swartzman's store.

Another complaint was filed against the Metropolitan Hotel, Tremont and Warren streets, by Joseph H. O'Brien, field supervisor of the state alcoholic beverages commission.

He said his inspectors found persons drunk and liquor on the tables in the hotel rathskeller at 12:40 Sunday morning, December 16. The complaint was taken under advisement.

The board officially notified hotels, clubs and restaurants that on New Year's night they may serve liquor until 3 a. m. and permit dancing until 4.

AMERICA
CHOOSES THE LEADER
FOR 1934

..and the Leader reveals new plans for 1935

AGAIN IN 1934
CHEVROLET WINS
LEADERSHIP
IN COMBINED PASSENGER
CAR AND TRUCK SALES

TODAY, at the closing of the year, we would like to report to you on certain subjects of interest to all motor car buyers and to thank the people of America for the goodwill and friendship which they have shown for Chevrolet.

Again in 1934, according to the latest registration figures available as we go to press, the men and women of America have awarded Chevrolet first place in combined passenger car and truck sales.

This marks the fourth consecutive year that Chevrolet has been the world's largest builder of motor vehicles and the sixth time during the past eight years that Chevrolet has occupied this position.

We know that you are not interested in sales records merely as sales records; and neither is Chevrolet; but we believe that you will be interested in these facts as an index of America's judgment of motor car value. For that is exactly what they are.

They show that men and women who have bought Chevrolet products during past years feel that they got such good value and good service that they bought Chevrolets again in 1934. And that a great many other people who had never bought Chevrolet products before were also impressed with Chevrolet value and decided to join the Chevrolet family of owners.

The combined demand of these two groups of buyers has spelled public preference for Chevrolet; and public preference is the only impartial and authoritative guide to better values.

Naturally, we of Chevrolet are very appreciative of this public preference for our products. We want to continue to be worthy of it. And so we have developed two new lines of Chevrolets that are superior in every way to the very sound and fine Chevrolets that have won such high public favor during the past year.

These two new Chevrolets will be presented for your approval on Saturday, January fifth. They embody important advances in all-round motor car quality with particular emphasis on operating economy and performance.

The engines are improved—and Chevrolet's famous Knee-Action Ride is made even smoother and more satisfying—for we believe in giving you the latest refinements in engineering and comfort each year. These are the best Chevrolets we have ever produced; and, of course, they will be offered in the two lowest price ranges.

We have built and sold approximately 870,000 passenger cars and trucks in 1934. We believe conditions are improving, and we expect to do considerably better than this next year, for we are confident that you will like our new products. They are the finest cars and biggest dollar values in Chevrolet history. Choose Chevrolet for Quality at Low Cost!

PAROLE PROBLEM

WASHINGTON BOARD'S REFORM LASTS A FEW, SHORT DAYS

By WINIFRED BLACK

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

Washington, Dec. 27—The board of pardons and parole of the District of Columbia has turned right around in its tracks and gone to the old secret pardon and parole system.

The crime clinic here passed a strong resolution against the secret pardon and parole idea.

For a week or so after the clinic had closed the local pardon and parole board agreed to carry out the terms of the resolution.

But some of the prisoners asking for parole and one or two convicts asking for pardons made a bitter protest against publicity.

Some of their friends, influential and otherwise, joined in that protest and as a consequence nobody was very much surprised to see the board change its mind and change it so suddenly that the last meeting was kept entirely private—as usual.

Nobody in Washington is ever very much astonished when some strange and mysterious "influence" steps into any situation. But perhaps it would be a good thing to talk over this thing of keeping all pardons and paroles secret.

It's quite easy to understand why a man who's been sentenced for a serious offense or a series of serious offenses should want this parole or even his pardon kept a dark secret.

Vigorous Protests

Every time the news gets out that such a parole or such a pardon is being asked for someone protests with more or less vigor.

But how about the world?

Should we consider the best interests of the sentenced criminal or should we think about the interests of the people he is quite liable to victimize?

Of course, no one with any heart or a vestige of human sympathy wants to turn thumbs down on any man who is really trying to go straight when he gets out of prison.

But after all should he and his rights and privileges be more precious than the rights and privileges of the honest, decent hard-working citizen?

Given New Chance

And why shouldn't a man out on parole change his name and go and live somewhere else and make a new start without trying to keep the whole miserable business a dark secret?

The people he robbed and tried to murder didn't have much of a chance with him, did they? Why should he be given so much more chance than he ever dreamed of giving to anyone else?

It is not the poor and unknown criminal who suffers from the secret pardon and parole or the public pardon and parole either.

Nobody knows anything about him anyhow.

The big shot, the tough guy—it's his friends who want that parole kept secret. I wonder why?

Can it be possible that they don't want the honest, well meaning world to know who is getting that parole or that pardon for them?

Interest of Public

There was nothing secret about the man's conviction to the penitentiary—why should there be something secret about his dismissal?

What is there to hide—If the pardon or the parole is really deserved, it is something to be glad of, not to hide like a disgrace or an undeserved humiliation.

What do you think about it, plain men and honest women of America?

Isn't it just about time for our public officials to think a little bit about you and your interests and not so much about the interests of the men who have proved themselves to be enemies to all decent, honest people?

BLANCHE RING OPENS With Merry Comedy

GAY, ENTERTAINING

"HER MASTER'S VOICE" VALUABLE ADDITION TO HOLIDAYS' MENU

By GEORGE HOLLAND

George Holland

In Clare Kummer's neat little comedy, "Her Master's Voice," Blanche Ring returns to the Boston stage at the Hollis Street Theater to the evident pleasure of the comedienne's followers, old and new. Boston has been greeting Miss Ring as a favorite daughter at each and all of her appearances since she was Broadway's toast as the girl who introduced the song "Rings on My Fingers, Bells on My Toes." Miss Ring clings to her charm and force. She is happy as Aunt Min, of Miss Kummer's enjoyable comedy.

"Her Master's Voice" was a favorite around the New England countryside the past summer. So many of the outlying summer companies presented this 1933 New York success that it is probable that some of its prospective customers have seen it already. But it is a good addition to the list of downtown attractions, and at the Hollis the play has been ably cast and presented.

Clarence Nordstrom, who has been absent from Boston through too many seasons, plays the part of Ned, which Rollo Young acted in New York. Mr. Nordstrom is an excellent light comedian, and as personable as ever. Miss Kummer's story is that of a loving young couple, six years married and parents of two children, who face the prospect of their modest income ceasing because Ned Farrar has lost his job.

A mother-in-law of the young man is no help in the situation. She is a plaintive creature, and a perennial heckler of her son-in-law. In the distance, and presently in the Farrar very living-room, is Aunt Min—Aunt Min on the wife's side. She is very rich because she married a Mr. Stickney who was many years her senior and Mr. Stickney died.

Aunt Min has not approved of her niece's marriage to Mr. Farrar, whom she meets upon her arrival, as he is doing the dishes and other chores around the house. Aunt Min believes the tragic young husband to be a man of all work, and forms a liking for him.

From this not too original situation of mistaken identity, the playwright takes her set of characters through situations which belong to farce as much as comedy. "Her Master's Voice" found rating with the best of last year's plays. It is frolicsome and entertaining.

Yvonne Printemps, the French star who has been playing in Noel Coward's "Conversation Piece," left Boston last night for New York after a journey here to view the British playwright's "Point Valaine" at the Colonial . . . Robert Emmett Sherwood, author of "The Petrified Forest," watched the premiere of "Point Valaine" and chatted with Mr. Coward . . . That was Tuesday. Mr. Sherwood saw a first performance of his own play at the matinee yesterday and must have been pleased. The Shubert was virtually sold out . . . At last night's performance, Leslie Howard and "The Petrified Forest" company drew 12 curtain calls from a huge audience. Mr. Howard made a little speech. Gilbert Miller has returned to New York, and Arthur Hopkins, who directed the Sherwood play, returned to Boston. Both Mr. Hopkins and Leslie Howard departed Boston an hour after Monday's premiere to pass Christmas with their families in Great Neck . . . Mr. Howard returned Christmas night for his performance, but the play's director waited until yesterday for his return . . . Thomas Mitchell in "Fly Away Home" re-lights the Plymouth Theater tonight for a 10-days' Boston engagement.

COMEDY ROLE

Story of Sea Folk Film Epic Photography Amazes

Novices Achieve Triumph

"MAN OF ARAN," AT FINE ARTS, AMONG SCREEN'S BEST

By JOYCE DANA

A drama of human life that is more absorbing and more beautiful than any of the synthetic stories of the studios has found its way to the Fine Arts Theater. "Man of Aran," pictured by Robert Flaherty from life on the barren and rocky islands that lie off the west coast of Ireland, raises motion picture photography to the level of the fine arts.

It's stupendous and breathtaking, and if the catalogued emotions and pigeon-holed plots of the majority of our indigenous film product are beginning to pall, you will find in the fierce grandeur and nobility of "Man of Aran," the most intensely real and deeply moving film in screen history.

Lest your reviewer mislead you, there is no narrative. There are no actors who have ever before faced a camera. There is first of all photography that has never been approached for greatness; but unlike so many films that place camera work above drama, "Man of Aran" has infinitely more than a stark and profound beauty. Its sheer drama lies in the simple story of Tiger King, Maggie Dirrane and Michael Dillane, their son, wresting life itself from the sea and from the craggy isles of the wild northern Atlantic.

Theirs is the proud heritage of a race of ancestors which for thousands of years has looked unquestioningly and with uncomplaining dignity to the bleak haven of Aran for home and happiness. They and their neighbors have no master save the sea. Watch them as they battle for more than two days to harpoon and capture a huge basking shark that will keep the community in oil for the lamps of Aran for a whole winter, surely the most exciting sequence the cinema has ever caught.

Watch young Michael hiding the precious bait in his tam, fishing from majestic heights, pulling his catch through a convenient crack in the toe of his boot. Watch Maggie's poise and grace, lugging great baskets of kelp, salvaging the handsful of precious soil in which to grow potatoes, struggling through the mountainous breakers to help her man through the perilous sea to safety.

Connie Bennett Signs Star Joins MGM Ranks

Her First Role Selected

OLD FAVORITE WILL BE FEATURED IN "SHE TAKES THE WHEEL"

By Louella O. Parsons
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 27—Constance Bennett, smart business woman and the gal who made it possible for other stars and directors to sign with more than one company, has herself all tied up on a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract. She signed her first long term contract since she was with Pathe and will become one of their stars. That means that Connie will do only MGM pictures. Wonder what happened to make her change her mind?

Constance's first will be an unproduced play, "She Takes the Wheel," by L. Du Rocher MacPherson. 'Tis a father and daughter theme and the background is Europe. Well, Connie knows her Europe! Am I right?

The holiday season should be celebrated by all those who have an interest in "Private World." Claudette Colbert, voted a box office draw by all of the film magazines, the film critics and everyone else who tells us what is wrong with pictures, plays the lead. She and Charles Boyer, the French actor, and Joan Bennett, will make a gorgeous threesome for "Private World," by Phillip Bottome.

Chatter in Hollywood

Christmas was a grand day for Eric von Stroheim. Some of his pals on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot read that he had pawned his gold cigarette case, presented to him after he made "The Merry Widow." They got up a collection, headed by Louis B. Mayer, Harry Rapf, John Considine, Jr., and Hunt Stromberg, and raised enough money not only to redeem the cigarette case but to put a goodly sum inside for Von's Christmas. This is one of the nicest gestures I have heard of in a long time, and it just goes to prove that the world isn't such a bad place after all, and Hollywood isn't as impervious to heartaches as most of the outside world believes.

An excited voice over the telephone told me that Mascot had taken over the Mack Sennett studios on a long term contract. It all sounds very financial and complicated, but the way I understand it is that the Guarantee Liquidating Corporation takes possession of the Sennett studios, January 10, and at that time will change the name to the Mascot studios. Nat Levine, who really has made some excellent pictures as an independent, will make his future productions at these studios. I hear the agreement covers the entire studio, with all the buildings and equipment on the property.

John Krimsky, the producer responsible for bringing "Maedchen in Uniform" to this country, and who had a part in the production of "Emperor Jones," has walked out of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He was signed and brought here from New York and, after he waited for three weeks without getting an assignment or the attention he felt he deserved, he decided the movies were no place for him. However, Warner Brothers held a conference with Krimsky and the chances are that he will remain in Hollywood, if not under the Warners' banner at least with some other company.

Snapshots of Hollywood

2 Month College Closing Puts Girls 'Out in World'

By Associated Press

Bennington, Vt., Dec. 27—The women of Bennington College were scattering to the far places today, seeking learning in fields from Bermuda to New York, from Mexico to Europe.

Bennington College has closed for two months and not until the end of February will the 250 students who left the campus last week resume their academic life. For two months they will be gaining practical experience in the fields of their main interest.

Winter projects, of which each girl has her own, range from the study of marine biology at the Bermuda station of biological research to work in a factory at ten dollars a week.

Students in the music division, most of whom will be in New York or Boston, plan to attend as many concerts as possible. Students of the dance will work in private studios.

Art students also will work in private studios and two have commissions for portraits, including one of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, in Washington. Others have apprentice jobs in architects' offices.

Those majoring in the drama have apprentice positions with the Theater Guild in New York. Students in the sciences have positions in various clinics, hospitals and laboratories.

Officials of the college said the practical knowledge will give the students a better insight into their major studies and help them to determine whether they wish to continue in their chosen work.

Manila, Dec. 27—Drifting helplessly after the engine of their motor boat broke down, the four New York members of the Griswold-Harkneess expedition were without water for five days until temporary repairs were effected and they made port at Tawao, Borneo, William H. Harkness radioed here.

The principal purpose of the expedition is to attempt the capture at Szechuen of a panda, a large cat-like beast, none of which are in captivity.

Girl Bares Nazi Jail Hardships

New York, Dec. 27—Isobel Lillian Steele, American girl who obtained first hand information about Nazi German dungeons when she spent four months in them as a political prisoner, prepared today to leave for her home in Hollywood, Cal., to spend New Year's Day with her family . . . her unhappy experiences overseas almost forgotten.

Interviewed last night . . . 12 hours after her arrival here in the liner President Harding . . . Miss Steele declared her desire was to obliterate from her consciousness her confinement and to return to normal living.

She said she was glad to be able to "talk freely," but, paradoxically, she made no serious effort to dispel the aura of mystery that has hung about her since her arrest in Berlin last August on unspecified charges.

She denied directly that she was a Communist and intimated that the reasons why she was arrested grew out of "a plot" which resulted from outspoken criticism of the muzzling of the German press and her defense of the Jews.

The girl said her cell in Moabit prison had a single barred window and a door that was solid except for a tiny peep hole. The only furnishings were a table, bed and straw mattress. She added that over the door of her cell was a cross, indicating she was marked for execution.

She declared she was compelled to arise at 5:30 a. m. to a breakfast of black coffee and bread and that a bath was permitted her only "every third week."

HULTMAN HITS "CHIEF EVILS"

POLITICAL RULE 'HURTS ALL,' SAYS COMMISSIONER

Pointing out as the "chief evil" the short tenure of office of the head of the police department which subjects him to control through political influence, Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman urged as "the most important step" the protection of tenure "in a similar manner as other judicial officers."

The Boston police commissioner made these statements in his annual report to Governor Ely made public today.

Commissioner Hultman said that "insecure and short tenure" which makes subordinates more secure than their chief results in poor discipline and lowers morale.

He urged that the method of making promotion on recommendation of the Civil Service Commission was abandoned.

LINK TROTZKY IN STALIN PLOT

Speedy Trial Ordered

BULLETIN
By Associated Press

Paris, Dec. 27—French officials said today that Leon Trotsky, exiled former Communist leader, was "safely hidden" in France and "even if the Soviets ask his extradition he will not be surrendered." The officials said Trotsky was "a long distance from Paris, living quietly and closely watched," both to protect him and to prevent him from engaging in undesirable activities.

By Associated Press

Moscow, Dec. 27—The Soviet government acted speedily today against a band of young Communists charged with having plotted the assassinations of Joseph Stalin and other high leaders with the aid of the exiled Leon Trotzky.

The assassinations were to be followed, the government alleged, by "the intervention of capitalistic powers."

Fourteen alleged plotters, including Leonid Nicolaieff, held since the slaying of Sergei Kiroff, high party official, at Leningrad December 1, were turned over to a military collegium of the supreme court for trial.

Swift justice for terrorists and immediate execution of those convicted has been ordered by the government in its determined drive to stamp out terrorism, and 103 already have been sent to firing squads since Kiroff's death.

TROTZKY IMPLICATED

After weeks of grilling Nicolaieff, members of his family and associates, government officials issued an announcement that he had confessed, implicating the others and Trotzky, now in hiding in France.

Confessions attributed to the plotters and testimony of witnesses just published showed the little group was pledged to overthrow the present party leadership and that Nicolaieff expected his revolver shot would start unrest.

The confession quoted Nicolaieff as admitting he received 5000 rubles (about $2500) from an unnamed foreign consul at Leningrad for support of terroristic activities.

ZINOVIEFF AS LEADER

Gregory S. Zinovieff and Leo Kameneff, once high in party councils, are under arrest in connection with the plot but were not sent to trial. They face expulsion.

"I thought our shot must be the signal for action against the party and the Soviet government," officials quoted Nicolaieff. "I had to show the murder of Kiroff as an independent act in order to hide the participation of the Zinovieffists in it."

Sent to trial with Nicolaieff were Ivan Kotolinoff, Nikolai Shatsky, Valdimir Rumiantzeff, Sergei Mandelstam, Nikolai, Masnikoff, Vladimer Levin, Leon Sositsky, George Bokoloff, Ignaty Yushkin, Vassily Yushkin, Vassily Zvezdoff, Nikolai Antonoff, Leon Khanik and Andre Tolmazoff.

Nicolaieff is 30 years old, and all members of the alleged "underground terrorist gang" are relatively young men. Kotolinoff, said to be one of the leaders, is the youngest, 29; and Mandelstam the oldest, 38.

Suzanne Davis Announces Engagement At Tea

By Betty Alden

OUR LITTLE FRIEND Cupid is having his usual rush to bring us engagement announcements during the holidays . . . This afternoon he presided at the informal tea party at the home of Mrs. Francis W. Davis of Windsor road, Waban, who announced to a company of intimate friends the betrothal of her daughter, Miss Suzanne Davis, to William H. King, son of Mrs. James Edward King of Richmond, Virginia . . .

CONSTANCE TURNER

Miss Davis, who needs no introduction to the skating fans of society, was graduated from the Beaver Country Day School and the Erskine School on Beacon street . . . She holds the national women's figure skating championship for 1934 and also won, with Frederick Goodrich, the national championship dance for mixed pairs . . .

Mr. King was graduated from Dartmouth in 1933 and is now associated in business in Richmond . . . There are no immediate plans for the wedding . . .

Debs Score in Play

WHEN MARTHA ENDICOTT and Jane Hamlen made their debut together in October, it was just the beginning of their experiences in sharing the spotlight together . . . They are now playing the leading roles in the annual Junior League production at the Repertory Theater and yesterday at the opening they impressed a large audience of mothers and younger children with the perfection of their ability as amateur actresses . . . Jane sets the tempo of the play with her excellent portrayal of the sporty Carew who figures largely in the adventures of the silver-throated lad, Master Skylark, played by Martha Endicott . . . Another of the season's buds, who is having her first opportunity to display her histrionic ability, is Frances Hovey who was not found wantng in her role as the unyielding landlord . . .

Chubby Martha Bird was even more so in the comedy role in which she was cast, having been stuffed with pillows to make a good rolly-polly butler . . . Jane Whitney and Eleanor Williams, who also made their debut together, were other fledglings cast in prominent roles as were Eleanor Claflin and Hope Blanchard . . . Sarah Bradlee repeated her success in former shows by playing a difficult part with finesse . . .

Among the spectators of the show who were very enthusiastic about the success of the efforts of the Junior League in attempting this dramatic undertaking, were Mrs. B. Davis Crowninshield, who chaperoned her daughter Louise and Mrs. Philip Gardner with her little girl, Louise, a future deb who will probably take her place before the footlights in the Junior League and Vincent Club shows . . . Mrs. George C. Bemis, president of the League, in a raspberry sweater over a checked woolen skirt, was receiving congratulations on all sides from the members of the audience . . .

Josephine Emery Petite and Vivacious

SANTA CLAUS FILLED Christina P. Barr's stocking so full of dolls that when she won the Lucky Number in the drawing of program numbers she chose a fire boat instead of a luxuriously dressed doll and proudly explained that she understood the mechanics of the toy . . . Josephine Emery, an officer of the League, petite and vivacious, wore a Kelly green sport jacket over dark green skirt for her duties as keeper of the program numbers . . .

Also to be seen in the audience were Barbara McKissock, in dark brown woolen dress with a tangerine scarf; Constance Turner, in a brown Russsian turban with a brown coat; Jane Bancroft, director of the play, in sturdy tweeds; Mary Bryant, selling candy and wearing a tailored dress of black and gold metal cloth; Carolyn Day, selling programs; Margot Warner, in brown tweeds; Mr. B. Nason Hamlen, proudly watching his daughter on the stage; Mr. Newell Bent, Mrs. Hugh Bancroft, in a tailored black coat, and Caroline Oveson, also in black . . .

A threesome enjoying the play from the middle of the house were Virginia Prout, garbed in bright green with a matching hat; Janet Reggio and Catherine Little . . . Margaret Swift, in a rose sweater blouse, and Ellen O'Donnell, in trim black and white tweed coat, paused on the steps to exchange notes on the holiday with friends . . . Mrs. Francis Welch, 2d, the former Ellen Cushing, was seen in earnest conclave at the box office after the performance purchasing tickets for younger cousins, who will represent the family at a later performance . . . By supporting this production of the Junior League society will do its part in maintaining the Community Health Association of Nurses . . .

Debs Going to White House Dance

THE DEBUTANTES WILL HOP onto the social merry-go-round again at the end of this week with all the excitement centering upon the dance at the White House on Saturday evening . . . Polly Wardwell is leaving for Washington tomorrow to be the house guest of Marianna Dunn for the week-end . . . Miss Dunn, who came to Boston for Miss Wardwell's debut at The Country Club last month, has just returned from Chicago, where she was feted at a large luncheon, followed by a skating party, at which her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Armour, were hosts . . . Though it is announced that informality will reign supreme at the White House dance and no white kid gloves will be worn, we suspect that some of the loveliest gowns of the season are being packed into suitcases bound for the Capital, and that later they will be carefully laid away in lavender with a pressed rose or a Parma violet as keepsakes of this momentous occasion . . .

Garrison Elders Visited by Stork

AFTER THE FESTIVITIES of Christmas week are over the college debs and their older sisters will go back to their Alma Maters to catch up on some sleep . . . There are countless parties being crowded into their short vacations, and the latest to come to our attention is the dinner party late this week at which Susan Binney and Hetty Richardson will be the guests of honor . . .

Mrs. O. L. G. Elder

A Christmas present of a baby daughter was presented to Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Garrison Elder of Chattanooga, Tenn. . . . Mrs. Elder is the former Alice Dalton, daughter of the Philip Daltons of Milton and plighted her troth to her Southern husband at a fashionable ceremony in Milton last winter . . . As soon as Sister Sue, the debutante of the Dalton household, tires of the round of festivities for her sister debs, Mr. and Mrs. Dalton and Miss Susan will go down to Tennessee to see the new infant . . .

SUB-DEBS HONORED AT DINNER PARTY

SUB-DEBUTANTES and younger brothers home from school are not to be outdone by their debutante sisters in the way of vacation parties. The first of the two Fisher Hill dances for sub-debs and prebeaux will be held at The Country Club this evening. The second is to be held during the spring vacation in April.

The committee in charge of the dance is comprised of Mrs. Sheldon Wardwell, Mrs. Stanwood G. Wellington, Mrs. Herbert Clark, Mrs. George W. Wightman, Mrs. C. Douglas Mercer, Mrs. Huntington R. Hardwick and Mrs. John Elwood Myers.

Every one invited to the dance will be a guest at one of the many dinners which are to precede it. Mrs. T. Barnet Plimpton is giving a dinner for her daughter, Miss Reinette Plimpton, who is celebrating her 18th birthday today.

Vacationing Students Feted at Many Parties

AT THIS TIME OF YEAR interest centers upon the college debutante who returns home for a sparkling whirl of parties and a brief respite from things academic. This whirl of entertainment engulfed Maude Jacobs and Ruth Kibbee when they returned from college before Christmas, but the high point of their vacation was the luncheon which Mrs. William F. Camp and Mrs. Austin S. Kibbee, both of Chestnut Hill, gave in their honor this afternoon.

Beyond the two debutantes as they received their guests the luncheon tables at the Ritz-Carlton, aglow with button chrysanthemums, sent forth a yellow wave of welcome. Miss Kibbee dressed in rust colored crepe and a brown velvet beret, carried an arm bouquet of talisman roses. Miss Jacobs chose blue crepe with a velvet beret to match. Mrs. Camp, who is Miss Jacobs' aunt, wore a very simple gown of black crepe, and Mrs. Kibbee wore brown velvet set off by gold metal cloth.

Among the many guests were Miss Katherine Coursen, of Madison, N. J., a classmate of Miss Jacobs at Smith College; Miss Cornelia Beck, of Connecticut, and Miss Arlette Phillipous, of New York. Both Miss Kibbee and Miss Jacobs were graduated from the Beaver school last June and many of their old schoolmates were seen among the luncheon guests. Miss Kibbee is now a freshman at Mills College, in Oakland, Cal.

Mrs. H. Given in Marriage

FROM TRAGIC ROMANCE TO PROBLEM OF TODAY

CHAPTER 227

"AT LAST, MY DARLING!" My father's tones were hushed, reverently joyful, as he finished putting upon my finger the sapphire [illegible] my mother had left [illegible] for him after her death.

He did not lift his head for several seconds and I did not speak. Indeed, I tried to hush even my breathing in that sacred moment fraught with the mystery which forever will linger about that other world, so near to us and yet so hedged by insuperable barriers.

WEAR THE RING ALWAYS

"You will wear the ring until years from now you pass it on to Faith?"

"That is a very easy promise to make, father," I tell him, "and one which I shall love to keep."

A tender [illegible] gently [illegible] touched the corners of his mouth.

"And as she is [illegible] a few months old," he said, "we can postpone speculation as to the time of the next change of ownership of the ring—when Faith's daughter is put into her arms. I, of course, shall not—"

He broke off abruptly, changed to a quick query. "Are you sure you are comfortable?"

BACK TO PRESENT PROBLEMS

But even as I gave him the assurance that he [illegible] heart cried out a protest against that unfinished sentence, for I knew that he [illegible] meant to say he would not live to see Faith receive that ring as her first benediction of motherhood.

Yet I must betray no reaction. I held myself rigidly to that promise, and my father's next words showed that he, too, was forcing himself to matter-of-fact consideration of the immediate problems confronting me.

"You have not changed your mind about staying out here until Junior and Roder [illegible] return?" he asked with apparent casualness.

"I couldn't [illegible] anywhere else," I told him earnestly. "Forgive me for [illegible] fussy, father, [illegible] not help feeling that way."

"Forgive you!" His voice was suddenly eloquent. "You are not more fussy over them than I am. I understand your feeling perfectly, and that is why I am emboldened to ask a book of you."

"You know that you have only to ask anything in my power to give you, father," I told him.

"I know that, my darling," he said with sudden fervor. "I am particularly wakeful tonight," he said. "It would be practically impossible for me to get to sleep for hours; and I want you to let me sit in the living room and read until the children get home."

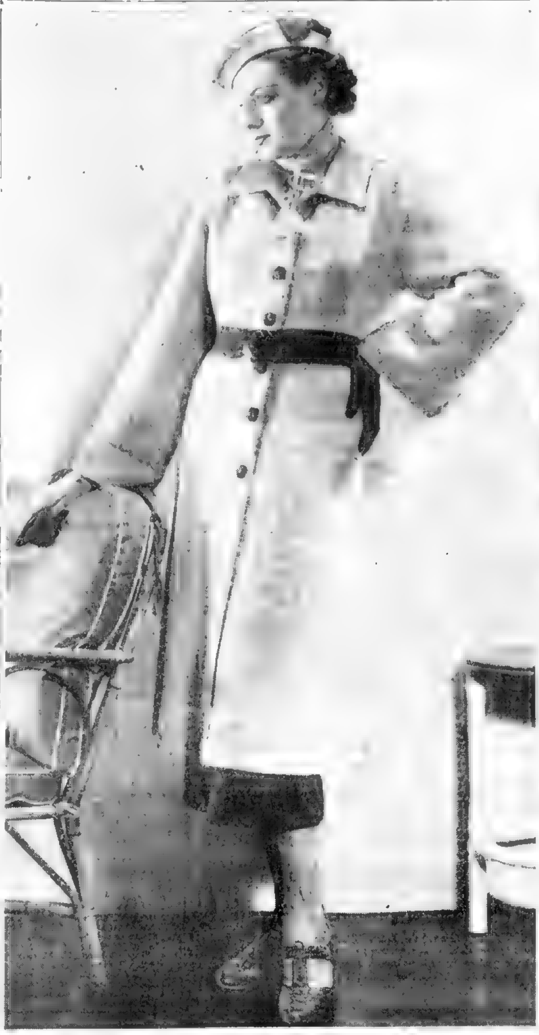
Downy Hand-Knits

Suit For Golden Cruise Hours

By Annice Brink

WHAT THE LACE evening gown is to the cruise evening wardrobe, so is the hand-knit to the daytime cruise wardrobe. Indispensable! If you've ever been caught in one of those misty "sea showers" while bicycling in Bermuda and had linens plastered to your back, you know what I mean. Knits stand the gaff, and dry off in a twinkling—whether on an acacia-lined coral road or on the sports deck of a big liner. Here, in all sincerity, is a daytime cruise wardrobe in one suit. The jauntily-made shirtmaker frock (which though hidden in the larger photograph, is shown in detail below), the belted coat for warmth as well as swagger, the separate vestee-gilet that may or may not be worn smartly inside the collar of the shirtmaker (substitute a scarf for variety) and the tight, chic hat. But, whisper it, if you're a slow knitter who won't be leaving for another clime this winter, why not have the outfit ready to come out with the first robin next spring?

Since directions which we offer today on the cruise ensemble are printed in a complete set, whether you wish for the entire ensemble or just one piece—say the vestee—gilet or the hat—you should send in double postage and a good-sized envelope. (4c if you're within Boston postal district, 6c otherwise). And write to Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, Boston Evening American.



ELEGANCE

Marks New Year's Eve Fashions

A [illegible] from New [illegible] of America!

By DOROTHY ROE

Showers of confetti on a glass dance floor, paper hats and serpentine, blare of trumpets and saxophones, bare white shoulders against black lapels, ermine and top-hats, orchids and champagne.

And most important of all in the New Year's Eve carnival are the romantic, the daring, the wicked new evening gowns.

Manhattan maidens just now are going in for colored lace tops to [illegible] evening gowns [illegible] the whiteness of arms and shoulders in a most distracting manner.

You'll see them in the smartest stay-up-late places on New Year's Eve—gowns of burgundy or gold or bottle green satin, with sheer lace jackets and starched lace ruffs.

You'll see, too, slinky dresses of metal cloth, that look as if they must have been melted and poured on, and imported robes de style, of stiff silk stuffs that rustle in time with the dance music.

You'll see 1880 gowns with off-the-shoulder decolletages and short puffed sleeves, with bodices cut daringly deep in front and shaped to a demure V in back.

You'll see modest, old-fashioned corsages of violets and pansies pinned at the waistlines of new dance dresses of net and chiffon, and you'll see distinct revivals of the mauve decade.

Mrs. Culbertson Says:

PLAYING BRIDGE "BY EAR" CAN BE PROFITABLE METHOD

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

When one's partner can be depended upon to put up an excellent defense against the adverse declaration, penalty doubles may often be made on minimum holdings. When one's partner is also an expert and sensitive bidder, and the bidding habits of the opponents are known, it is sometimes possible to inject a double into the bidding on cards that seem almost worthless. Such doubles are based more "on the sound of the bidding" than on the intrinsic worth of one's cards and while playing bridge "by ear" cannot be generally recommended, it is often a very profitable method.

East, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

North: ♠ 4 2 ♡ 10 5 ◇ 9 6 3 ♣ K Q 10 9 7 4

West: ♠ J 10 ♡ A K 9 8 ◇ A 7 5 2 ♣ 8 5

East: ♠ 9 8 7 5 ♡ J 6 2 ◇ Q J 10 4 ♣ A J 3

South: ♠ A K Q 6 3 ♡ Q 7 4 3 ◇ K 8 ♣ 6 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠	Pass (1)	2 ♣
Pass	2 ♠ (2)	Pass	Pass (3)
Double (4)	Pass	Pass (5)	Pass (6)

(1) Since East had already passed, West could see no prospect of an East-West game. His suits are not strong enough to overcall, and a takeout double does not seem strategically sound. He hopes that the adversaries will overbid, lulled into a false sense of security by the adverse silence.

(2) A sound rebid.

(3) In the face of his partner's minimum bid, North could find no excuse for a rebid.

(4) At this point, East realized that the opponents were not going anywhere. Since they were, if anything, aggressive bidders it was plain that West must have a few top cards although that his suits were probably rather thin. Some action seemed indicated, since on defense East could stop the clubs and diamonds while his spade length promised to put plenty of difficulty in the path of South if he should hold the contract at spades; if West elected to bid, East could furnish good support for the diamonds and fair support for the hearts.

(5) West, of course, recognized the double for what it was, but with three honor-tricks a penalty pass was his best procedure.

(6)—North toyed with the idea of rescuing at three clubs but finally decided that his partner might be better off at spades with only eight tricks to play for.

West opened the king of hearts and shifted to a trump when receiving East's discouraging deuce. The shift was safe because East had to have the club situation well in hand to justify a double. Declarer drew three rounds of trumps and started the clubs. East now led the diamond queen through and try as he might, South could not take more than four trump tricks and a club. East and West thus netted themselves 900 points, of which half were due to a very sensitive double and an equally sensitive pass.

Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your questions to Josephine Culbertson, in care of this newspaper.

BETTY GOW BACK IN 'THE FAMILY'

Fond of Her

ACTS AS MAID UNTIL TRIAL

By DOROTHY DUCAS
Copyright, 1934, by International News Service

Englewood, N. J., Dec. 27—Betty Gow, nurse to the first Lindbergh baby, is back with "her" family—the Lindberghs and the Morrows—because, in the words of an intimate: "They're genuinely fond of the poor girl."

The pretty Scotch nursemaid is living in the great house on the [illegible] here until time to testify at the trial of Bruno Hauptmann, accused kidnaper and murderer. She belongs there. At least "her" family thinks so.

A [illegible] friend of the family [illegible] this today as Betty went [illegible] what petty household tasks [illegible], wrapped in the silence of the Morrow estate.

Nothing mysterious attaches to the presence of the Glasgow girl in [illegible] according to the friend. She is here as she was once before, following the birth of Jon Morrow Lindbergh, second son of the famous flier and his wife. Whenever she chooses to work as a nurse maid she can find a place with them.

Proof of Faith

Proof of the family's faith was offered when Betty remained through the months preceding the birth of Jon to become Jon's first nurse. She left the Lindbergh employ only because she herself was [illegible] obsessed with [illegible] [illegible] worn down with worry [illegible] began the same way "If ——"

Now she has come back to fulfill what she considers her duty in behalf of her position with the Lindbergh-Morrow family. She represented them back in May 1932 when someone who knew every contour of the baby's body had to appear at a morgue to identify the miserable little body.

She will, in a sense, represent them again.

It was strongly intimated by the friends of the family that Betty might remain on in Englewood even after the trial. On [illegible] [illegible] up to Betty as it was before. Perhaps her nervousness will disappear if the [illegible] kidnaper of the first [illegible] is no longer at large.

She is being afforded every opportunity to rest while in Englewood. There is another nurse in attendance on little Jon, so Betty's services are not essential throughout the day.

This Is Life

By ROGERS

Always the week between Christmas and New Year's seem to have an atmosphere totally unlike any other week in the year.

It is entirely appropriate that Christmas should be the climax of the year. From the beginning, before there was a calendar, when mankind calculated time only by the stars in their courses and by the revolving sun, there came every year the one day when the sun all but died, the shortest day in all the three hundred and sixty five.

[illegible]

The climax of the year is Christmas. [illegible]

business is an artificial activity out of step with the natural processes of the year.

There are after-Christmas sales to plan and celebrate, there is stock taking to be done, in preparation for a new fiscal year, there is no breathing space here.

Children Free

But the children set the tone of the week. Here they are everywhere, free of school or home from school, crowding the stores and the movies and the theaters, going to parties, going to dances, thronging forth to skate, day long and night long.

These are the days for the answering of Christmas letters, for the acknowledging of Christmas gifts, a good old custom, nowadays more honored in the breach than in the observance; for totting up the year's bills and seeing how many of them—if any—can be paid by the New Year's.

Not ours the ancient and excellent Jewish and Chinese custom to either pay or forgive all debts on New Year's day. That magnificent western invention of double-entry bookkeeping forbids that.

What are billing machines for, anyway, if not to encourage credit?

Now is the time for astrologers of the world to issue their flamboyant prophecies of what we may expect for the next twelfthmonth.

And those delvers into newspaper morgues to inform us what were the 10 or 12 greatest news stories of the past year, which event earned the greatest number of columns, and how that number compared with the greatest stories of the past. A harmless amusement and productive of much interesting entertainment for an hour or two.

Now is the week for planning your work until at least Easter. You will never do it according to schedule, as you know perfectly well but at least you can jot it down and glow with pride at the schedule almost as if the work were already done.

But just as the year gallops toward the climax of Christmas, this week gallops towards the climax of New Year's Eve, and before you know it you are blowing horns and hurling confetti (as your taste calls for) or sitting in a quiet Watch Night service waiting for the chimes to bring the New Year.

And then you start all over again!

GIRLS! New Year's HINTS

TECH MEN RUSH TO RESCUE

'UNDERSTAND' WOMEN, WANT TO BE HELPFUL

College girls, pondering over just what sort of resolutions to make for the New Year, may find a hint or two in a list of suggestions compiled by Tech men, who are generously offering a list without thought of reward.

The Tech men who made the list, modestly announced that they merely thought that beautiful co-eds might like a helping hand from college men with scientific training, who admit, in addition, to "understanding women."

Here are a few of the suggestions for resolutions which the M. I. T. boys have listed for Miss 1935.

1—I resolve to use only kiss-proof lipstick, for I appreciate the hazards which less enduring forms endow their recipients.

2—I resolve never to hint at a date late in the week, when the boy friend's allowance is at ebb tide. Rather I shall wait until the first of the month, and then make him pay dearly for the postponement.

3—I resolve never to ask the boy friend, "Where were you last night," for I realize the difficulties under which he labors to answer this query.

4—I resolve to remind him with vim and vigor that driving with one hand is one of my outstanding "Don'ts" and thus lend my aid to Registrar Ryan's crusade on auto dangers.

5—I resolve to spend more time learning the art of housekeeping that I may be better fitted to do my share in stretching the family budget, and not expect to have a maid do all the work for me the first years of marriage.

6—I resolve to endeavor to tolerate his weaknesses for other girls and only hope that by remaining loyal, I shall prove to him the value of devotion.

7—I resolve to want to do what he wants to do, and if he says "Let's go skating," just wax enthusiastic, even though my toes are tingling to go dancing.

The basis of these resolutions it appears are perhaps not over altruistic, the M. I. T. boys say, but—what a life preserver such a girl would be in these days.

Sales Drive

Plans for a spring sales drive were outlined last night to the entire personnel of Roskin Distributors, Inc., of 113 Commonwealth avenue, New England Philco radio distributors, at a dinner in the Hotel Kenmore.

The occasion also marked the firm's 20th anniversary. Among the speakers were Sam Roskin, president; J. Abramson, treasurer and sales manager; J. R. Kennelly and S. L. Scheer.

Cat Freed After 3 Days In Wall Pen

None the worse for her ordeal, Kitty, jet black cat, pet of clerks in a Jamaica Plain chain store, joyfully scampered about today, rescued after a three-day involuntary imprisonment between the ceiling and floor.

Carpenters, police and Animal Rescue League employes released the cat after eight holes had been cut in the ceiling.

Since Sunday the cat had been held prisoner. Its plight was discovered when a clerk went into the store that day to feed the pet and heard its cries.

The clerk tried in vain to effect the cat's rescue and then called police. The latter called upon the Animal Rescue League.

Finally "Kitty" was seen to poke her head through an opening. Rescue league men lifted the cat to safety.

MOTHER OF GLORIA LOSES NEW PLEA

Order Signed

GUARDIAN PLEA IS REFUSED BY SURROGATE

By Associated Press

New York, Dec. 27—Surrogate James A. Foley today signed an order formally denying an application of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt for appointment as guardian of her ten-year-old heiress daughter, Gloria.

Hearing on a companion application that the mother be appointed a co-guardian of the child's property was set for January 3, at 10:30 a. m.

Surrogate Foley ruled that the question of personal guardianship over the little girl had been covered adequately in the decision of Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew at the close of a sensational court battle between Mrs. Vanderbilt and the child's paternal Aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

Justice Carew made the child a ward of the supreme court and named Mrs. Whitney her principal custodian. He also provided that the child should spend week-ends with the mother at her home in New York City.

The order also formally struck out the notices of appearance in the proceedings of Mrs. Whitney and the child's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Laura K. Morgan, who aligned herself with Mrs. Whitney during the custody fight in Supreme Court.

The order signed by the Surrogate was submitted by [illegible] for George W. W[illegible] [illegible] as [illegible] general guardians of the child's estate.

A counter order submitted by Mrs. Vanderbilt, providing that the denial of custody to Mrs. Vanderbilt be made without prejudice was not signed by the Surrogate. The counter order included the words "is hereby without prejudice." This was the only difference in the orders.

A memorandum submitted by Mrs. Vanderbilt's counsel, however stated that the counter-order provided that the custody application may be withdrawn without prejudice."

"We believe, the memorandum set forth," that this is only fair, in view of the fact that there is pending the appeal from the decision of Justice Carew.

"The petitioner (Mrs. Vanderbilt) believes that if the appeal is decided in her favor and she is ultimately entitled to the custody of the child in such habeas corpus proceedings, she should be given the right to renew her application to the court."

CLARK TO SUCCEED CASEY?

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
BOSTON THURSDAY, DECEMBER

PRO Seems SET

TALKS WITH BINGHAM

SOME BELIEVE HE ALREADY IS SIGNED

Harvard's football coaching problem moved rapidly toward solution today. George "Potsy" Clark, Detroit Lions coach in the National pro grid league, appeared the answer.

Named exclusively in the Boston Evening American several weeks ago as a strong candidate for the Crimson berth to succeed Eddie Casey, Clark this morning again was reported a jump ahead of the field in the race for the position.

Special correspondents at the New York football coaches' meeting reported that Clark had the edge on several other candidates, if, indeed, he was not already signed to coach Harvard's eleven in 1935.

Bill Bingham, Harvard director of athletics, conferred with Clark recently. Bingham also has contacted a number of other men available for the position. After all angles are considered Clark's candidacy appears strongest.

Clark was an All-Western quarterback at Illinois in 1915. He served in the World War and played on the service champion eleven with several former Harvard headliners.

Friendships formed at that time have been cited as reasons why Clark had more than an outside chance for the job.

The Detroit Lions are reported to have Clark signed for next year, but it is not likely they would stand in the way of his taking the coveted Crimson berth.

Jones Silent

Barton Rouge, La., Dec. 27—Offers of coaching jobs for Biff Jones, ex-Louisiana State mentor, are still coming in.

Possibility that the Harvard job might have been offered Jones was indicated by his admission that he had received several excellent offers, but was not at liberty to name them.

The Harvard job is considered a possibility. Jones was on very friendly terms with officials there while his Army teams were meeting Harvard.

The position is considered the prize catch of the year for any football coach.

Hitch's Ice Cubs Owe It All to Reds

Six in Row

N. E. A. A. A. U. IN FOG RULING ON PATRICK BOY

By Bill Grimes

Manager Frank Patrick and his Bruins are in Montreal for a return engagement with Tommy Gorman's Maroons. With the exception of the Maple Leafs and the Maroons, Bruins have better than an even chance of coming through.

Manager Lionel Hitchman is readying his Cubs for Saturday night's game at the Arena with the Rhode Island Reds. "Hitch" is devoting plenty of time to the long passes up to the attacking blue (or is it green) line. The Cubs owe their present standing in the race for Can-Am honors to their success over the Reds, with whom they have played six games without losing a decision.

If Major Bob Neyland has any voice in the matter, "Biff" Jones will not coach the University of Tennessee . . .

While on the subject of the A. A. U., get a load of this one . . . The St. Michael's College junior team of Toronto is one of the best amateur combinations in Ontario. The Detroit Olympia was anxious to book the juniors but changed its mind when it was alleged that the A. A. U. demanded 50 per cent of the gross receipts before it would sanction the appearance of the kids in Detroit.

The New England branch of the A. A. U. has declared Joe Patrick, son of the Bruins manager, an "imported player" . . . That's a laugh. Joe did not come here to play hockey. He is studying at New Prep to enter Harvard next Fall . . . Frank Patrick is probably in full accord with the N. E. A. A. A. U. for its decision, but still, it is a tough break for young Joe and another example of the befogged mental condition of the local A. A. U. officials.

Hot Springs, Ark., Dec. 27 (US)—Barney Ross would like to oblige the moguls of the New York State Boxing Commission and acquiesce in their demand that he fight Lou Ambers or some other outstanding challenger, but the edict of the New Yorkers will have to wait until after January 25, when Ross fights Frankie Klick in Miami.

"All arrangements for the Miami bout have been closed. Ross will leave for Chicago next week to begin training."

CHAMPION 2-MILE RELAY FORESEEN

By Walter Kiley

Delayed almost a month, Jack Ryder's Boston College Eagles have finally seen the completion of their new 12-lap outdoor board track. Practice spins are now being held daily, but much work must be done by the fliers before they are ready for the indoor meets.

The Eagles have high hopes of another champion two-mile relay. The return of Donald Fleet will be a big boon in the later meets.

Fleet, who has been out of college a year, will enroll during the second semester. Before his withdrawal, he was one of the East's finest half-milers.

With Fleet back, the quartet should line up with Donald McKee and Ben Hines, sophomores, and Johnny Downey, a junior, who sprung to life in startling fashion by shading two minutes for the half. Hines, however, led by a small margin in the very good time of 1 58.

McKee in the 880, and Hines in the mile, were two of the Eagles four racers who won the intercollegiate freshman relay championship in New York last winter. Hines, in addition, won the mile at the Greater Boston Intercollegiates and the Holy Cross dual meet last spring.

McKee, a former Everett High and Huntington performer, walked off with three firsts against the Holy Cross freshmen last spring.

There are several former Greater Boston schoolboys who give promise of bringing new track laurels to University Heights.

Arthur Cox of English High, former State 880-yard champion, set up a new state 1000-yard record last winter. Tom McFarland of Arlington cleared better than six feet in the international meet with the Italian team at the Stadium. Then there is Eddie Cady of Commerce, former Regimental 300-yard champion, who is coming along well.

Tom King, Bob Roach, Tom Daley, Bill Scannell and Bill Gill are other newcomers of promise.

Vantres Wins

Al Vantres won from Lloyd Stewart, two falls out of three, in the feature mat bout of the Revere Walkathon card. Vantres' big asset was the flying tackle. Twice he downed the would-be wild man with the tackle.

Stewart won the first fall in 18 42 with a body lift and slam. Ventres took the next two with flying tackles in 12:15 and 2:40, respectively.

In the semifinal, Dynamite Dunn pinned Al Kimball in 21 20, with body. Other results had Rudolph Rudy and Wendell O'Dell, Eddie Parquette and Joe Ferrona, going to 30-minute draw decisions.

COLLEGE SPORT BACKSLIDING

Depression Hit Ideals, Is Finding

By Associated Press

New York, Dec. 27—Howard J. Savage, author of the famous 1929 Carnegie Foundation report on widespread evils in college athletics, told the Sportsmanship Brotherhood's luncheon meeting today that a "retrograde" movement is again under way in some parts of the country.

While no survey has been undertaken in the past five years, Savage said "[illegible] doubted if the present situation in American college sport . . . presents enough new facts of a nature sufficiently different from the facts of 1925-31 to make a re-study of the situation yield many important fresh principles."

Asserting that from [illegible] sources he has received a good deal of information about present-day college sport, [illegible] that all of the information [illegible] ful.

Blame Alumni

"Quite the contrary," he said, "a large proportion of it is not cheerful at all. Some institutions that once seemed to be making notable progress towards clean sport have wavered in their course. Others that once had good records have fortified them, sometimes under pressure of alumni. Still others have continued and even intensified their shady practices.

"If I were asked to compare the athletic situation today with that of earlier years I should say that perhaps for a year and a half following April, 1929, there was certainly a distinct improvement in some of the darker phases of American college sport. Then there came a change.

Income Drops

"With 1933 indications grew fairly definite that in some parts of the country a retrograde movement was under way. The depression had begun to lay hold upon the colleges. The result was, I think two-fold on the one hand, college and university income . . . was falling seriously. Athletics suffered their full share of financial difficulties. On the other hand, and perhaps even more important, the feeling of economic insecurity that resulted from the actual decline of educational income led to a kind of panic fear, which . . . began to impair the morale of administrative officers, faculties, and trustees, and even in some cases of undergraduates. Those were least worried who did not think too much and who trampled hardest upon their scruples."

Savage commended the [illegible] with which sports reporters and commentators wrote of the [illegible] subsidization of athletes [illegible]

Santa Good to Huskies

DROPS TWO GOALERS INTO RAYMOND'S NET

Kris Kringle made a short visit at Northeastern University over the holiday and dropped two new goalies into the Husky net.

Bill Dingwell, Milton senior who was regular net-tender two years ago, reported for practice following the beginning of the second semester's work. Last year Bill shared the job with Jim Denton.

In addition, Nelson Raymond, N. U. hockey coach, has another candidate for the net-minding job in Jack Diamondstone, an Empire Stater. Diamondstone's first tutor was the great Ching Johnson, who coached the Hackley School sextet at Tarrytown.

Thus, with Andy Abbott, who started against Boston College coming along fast, despite his inexperience, Raymond is confident his boys will be able to avenge the defeat at the hands of "Snooks" Kelley's Eagles when the two clubs meet again, January 4, at the Arena.

Stewart Mayberry, grid quarter, who gave up basketball for hockey was moved into the first-string outfit today, exchanging places with Charlie Radden.

AUSTEN LAKE on

Ireland's Daniel Thrown to Wrestling Lions

Austen Lake

I QUESTION WHETHER young Daniel O'Mahoney, the velvet cheeked Irish wrestler is going to love America more, or feel his homesickness for the green pastures and bosky lingles of his native island less after meeting Ernie Dusek at the Garden on January 4.

Ernie is the hyena boy of our younger wrestling set with a fearsome array of [illegible] tusks and a wildwood savagery, who likes to gnaw an opponent like a meat bone [illegible] off strips of their personal bark.

And Ernie makes sucking noises in his throat that are a mixture of porcine grunts and prehistoric snarls that continue throughout his match and can be quite frightening to a gentle bewildered lad like Daniel.

He is just as unlovely a person in his ring manner as Ernie as Daniel is a trim, pink-skinned boy type with a shy gentle way.

This is a sort of wrestling plot most popular with the people, who like to see rugged, homespun virtue beat the sawdust filling out of the [illegible] zoo men.

There is an interesting aspect, too, in the question of whether Daniel, who is a tempertsh sort under his plain, docile style, will lose his temper. I have never seen a genuine burst of anger in the wrestling ring, only the synthetic sort with make-believe spasms and bluster.

As a student of human emotion, I am waiting to see whether genuine, flaming fury has any place in wrestling and whether Daniel, as Ireland's advertised strongest man, will dust the ring furniture with Ernie, or hog-tie himself in a futile, helpless knot.

Money Miseries of a Glove Champion

WHEN IN BOSTON LAST WEEK, Jack Dempsey and Max Baer, past and present heavyweight champions, were bemoaning the public's erroneous idea of the riches and wealth that are supposed to filter into a champion's pocket.

"It costs me $50 a day just for handout money," complained Baer.

"You get by cheap," snorted Dempsey. "I passed out an average of $200 to squeeze-artists for every day I was champion."

"Try to give less than a dollar tip," added Baer, "and a bellboy gives you a bubbling tongue."

"There's no such thing as small change," mourned Dempsey. "You kiss a finnuf good-bye every time you take a taxi ride."

"Yeh an you gotta take a five-room hotel suite . . . and a valet, secretary, greeter an' all that," groaned Baer.

From which testimony one gathers that every day is Christmas in upper-crust ring society with the champion playing Santa to the cadgers.

Hockey's Rubber Bullet

TERROR TO ALL NATIONAL HOCKEY LEAGUE goalkeeps is the penalty shot, and the flying rubber bullet that comes screaming at them from a 10-yard range in front of the cage. Reason is, not only the terrific speed of the shot, generated by a flying start and straightaway drive, but that it comes up "cold," with none of the scramble and excitement of the usual goal foray.

"That puck, from a penalty shot, is the fastest thing that flies in any sport," says Tiny Thompson, Bruins' goalie. "It's faster than Walter Johnson's or Lefty Grove's speed ball at the height of their pitching careers."

Which is a fair comparison. Consider how a major league catcher would feel on being asked to stop one of Johnson's or Grove's fireballs at a 30-foot range. And even then a catcher sees twice as much of a baseball as a hockey goalkeep sees of a puck, with its flat, thin side zipping up.

INCIDENTALLY, "NEWSY" LALONDE, veteran manager of the Montreal Canadiens, has added another peril to the penalty shot. "Newsy" claims that a dry stick, one fresh from the locker room, will put a terrific spin on a puck which a wet stick cannot impart.

This spin and high speed combine to give the puck a small, fast breaking curve that is doubly hard to judge, and which, even when it is blocked, tends to break through and into the cage.

Always "Newsy"

A dry hockey stick just out of the locker room, will impart a terrific spin to the puck which a wet stick cannot do, says the manager of Les Canadiens.

N. E. Betting Champions

THE FEVER of New England's betting public to feed its money into the pari-mutuel choppers continues to be the marvel of the horse track world.

In California, where 50,000 persons attended the premiere opening of the Santa Anita horse plant, $259,000 was bet. Yet, on September 4, Narragansett handled $741,000 with 53,000 present, while less than 100 miles away, on the same afternoon, Rockingham handled $438,000 with an attendance of 30,000.

This takes a little more explaining than merely New England's sudden hunger for gambling.

As one seasoned horse trainer tells me, "New England has not felt the real hardships of the depression the way other sections have. There's more of everything up here."

Yet the original opponents of the Massachusetts betting bill claim that most of Narragansett's and Rockingham's betting flood was "desperation money," offered by needy folk with insufficient cash for their debts in the hope of making their handful of dollars grow into a rich and adequate harvest.

Football's Safety Valve Blows Off

IN THE McALPIN HOTEL at New York today, casual guests are being startled by the sight of grown men with athletic setups, sprawling on the lobby carpets, crouching and jostling each other, or standing around in tight huddles, arguing earnestly.

These are the college football coaches from all over the country, met in their annual convention. And whenever men of this breed gather, they demonstrate their latest theory of blocks, tackles, running guards and interference in whatever crowded spot they happen to be.

There will be much language spilled and oratory exploded on this and that side. But in the end the coaches will pack their luggage and depart, feeling that they have done the job up brown. Then they'll forget about it and do nothing for another year.

Santa Anita $15,000 Derby Attractive

Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 27—Fifty-three classy coming 3-year-old thoroughbreds were nominated for the $15,000 added Santa Anita Derby, according to the list released by Webb Everett, racing secretary.

Practically every leading stable in the country is represented in the stake that will be run February 16 at a mile and one-sixteenth.

Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, who won the Christmas stakes with High Glee and who is pointing Equipoise for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, named three smart youngsters for the Derby.

They are Rough Diamond, Pantoufle and Pundit, with the first named considered the best of the trio.

The Greentree Stable of Mrs. Payne Whitney is represented by Gillie and Peradventure, both of which performed well in the East before being shipped to Santa Anita Park.

The latest nominations to be received were those of the Brookmeade Stable, owned by Mrs. Dodge Sloan. She named World Series and Shining Light, and they will probably be shipped West with Cavalcade around the latter part of January.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 27—Palm Beach will invade Los Angeles in considerable force in February.

At least a dozen private cars will go from the famous Florida resort bearing members of the society mob who wish to view the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap. Several private cars are also going from New York.

Some of the travelers will have a personal interest in the race. Others are going as friends of those who have a personal interest, while a number will be mere sightseers.

Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloan, owner of the mighty Cavalcade, will have [illegible] her friends.

Good Goods and possibly Okapi [illegible] the others are for the three-year-old stakes at Santa Anita.

Hank Greenberg and Dan O'Mahoney at Dinner Tonight

By Jack Conway

HANK GREENBERG, greatest Jewish baseball player, and Dan O'Mahoney, Irish heavyweight wrestling champion, will break bread tonight at the Fathers and Sons Night dinner of the Temple Ohabei Shalom Brotherhood, Beacon street, Brookline.

Greenberg and O'Mahoney have skyrocketed to fame. Greenberg's marvelous play at first base and [illegible] were important factors in enabling the Tigers to win the American League pennant. Greenberg lives in the Bronx section of New York. He proved that one can come up from the sidewalks of a great city and become a famous ball player.

Mr. Boston

The meeting between Greenberg and the colorful O'Mahoney should be interesting. The Irish champion first gained fame when he defeated Dr. Patrick O'Callaghan at throwing the 56-pound weight. He then went in for wrestling and gained international recognition when he battled to a sensational draw with Strangler Lewis in London.

The Premier [illegible] O'Mahoney in New York, and a specially chartered airplane carried him to Boston. He spurned a $100,000 offer from Paul Bowser for six matches here but finally agreed to engage in one tussle at the Garden.

His opponent will be the rugged Ernie Dusek, Nebraska Wildcat, and the contest will be staged by Paul Bowser for the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser a week from Friday night.

"Rabbit" May Appear

Maranville still hopes to regain his old position in the regular line-up, and isn't the least bit enthused about becoming a coach for the Braves.

Dave White, former Harvard track star, will be a speaker. He will tell of plans to send the American team to the second Maccabiad, the Jewish Olympic games in Tel-Aviv, Palestine, next April.

I shall derive considerable pleasure sitting in with Hank Greenberg tonight.

Random Shots at Target

PAUL BOWSER has been severely criticized by Irish followers of Dan O'Mahoney for matching the latter with Ernie Dusek . . . The O'Mahoney supporters believe the Irish champion should not be called upon to meet such a rugged opponent as Dusek at this stage of his mat campaign . . . There were so many protests against Dusek as an opponent for O'Mahoney that Bowser took the matter up with the youthful Irish giant . . . O'Mahoney wasn't the least bit upset over Dusek's reputation as a bad man, and insisted that the match go on . . . He said he would break Ernie in two and throw him back to Nebraska.

The undertaker wouldn't agree to bury Frank until somebody guaranteed the bill . . . Jimmy Brady agreed to do this and said he would earn the money in the ring . . . Stumpy Jacobs was to have met Bass, but an injured hand caused him to pull out of the match . . . Brady took his place . . . The undertaker's bill is $426.50, and it looks as if Jimmy Brady will have to do a great deal of fighting to pay it, especially at $32.40 a bout.

Trojans Take on Hebrews At Arena Tonight

Third Place

PRO CLUBS VIE FOR SAME SPOT IN STANDINGS

By Bob Ahearn

Two brilliant professional basketball quintets, Philadelphia Hebrews and Boston Trojans, vie for honors this evening at the Arena in an American League fray. The largest crowd of the season will be in attendance to see these fives battle it out for sole possession of third place in the standing.

The Hebrews are rated the greatest team in the history of the game. World champions and pennant winners in the American League last season. They have met the Trojans twice this season, with each club winning a verdict. Tonight's tilt will be the rubber match, and a lively battle should result.

Cy Kaselman, leading the league in scoring, will hold down one of the guard berths for the Hebrews. Averaging more than 12 points per game this season he may prove a thorn on the side of the Trojan defense. Coach Fiddle Morley, Trojan mentor, will rely on George Glasco to stop Kaselman.

DON PETRIN HAS BEATEN RING STARS

NEW JERSEY BOXER TO MEET LEWIS AT ARENA

Don Petrin, New Jersey light heavyweight who meets John Henry Lewis of Los Angeles in a 10-round bout at the Arena on the afternoon of New Year's Day, has a first class record.

He has won from Joe Knight, Tom Patrick, Buddy McArthur, Eddie Simms, Al Stillman, Bob Godwin and Billy Jones.

Petrin fought a 10-round draw with the sturdy Tony Galento, who is now under the management of Jack Dempsey.

He has beaten the hard hitting George Nichols of Buffalo over the 10-round route, while he has been outgalloped by Maxie Rosenbloom and Bob Olin in 10-round contests.

John Henry Lewis invaded the East after making an impressive record in California rings, where he started boxing in 1931. Lewis is 20 years old and weighs 175 pounds.

In his New York bouts, he won from Tony Shucco in 10 rounds, stopped Yale Okum in three, and lost the decision to Jimmy Braddock in 10.

Lewis defeated Braddock and Maxie Rosenbloom in bouts on the Coast.

John Henry is a good right hand puncher. His punching power enabled him to win the decision over Norman Conrad of Wilton, N. H., in a 10-round go on the Coast.

Hunt Menaced

OPPOSITION STERN IN JUNIOR TENNIS

New York, Dec. 27—Although rated an odds-on choice for the national junior indoor tennis title, Gilbert A. Hunt, former M. I. T. student, of Washington, D. C., found his path to the championship vacated by Frankie Parker seriously menaced today by two Easterners and a well taught pair from Northwestern University.

The Eastern contenders, with Hunt himself, are Robert Madden of Pittsburgh and Jackie Behr of New York. The duo from Northwestern are Russell Ball and Donald Leavens.

Hunt, seeded No. 1, drew a first round bye and then sailed through George Hirshman of New York, 6—1, 6—3, to reach the third round.

In the boys' division, the champion, Robert A. Low of Choate school, led an advance of favorites into the second round by whipping a schoolmate, George Kelly, 6—1, 6—4.

Heavy Class At Southie Sparkles

The Irish American A. A. will stage its weekly boxing tournament tonight at the clubrooms, No. 390 Broadway, South Boston, with five classes, 126, 147, 160 pounds and heavyweights, all open.

Yancey Henry of L[illegible], the boy who outpunched Bill DeM[illegible] last week; John Stempouski of Hyde Park, Frank Delinkise, W[illegible], and Pat O'Hanlon, Hyde Park, are entered in the heavy class.

San Francisco, Dec. 27—Big Nick will assume a new role in the East-West all-star game at Kezar Stadium New Year's Day.

Big Nick is Al Nichelini of St. Mary's, the fastest ball toter in the West and perhaps the East, too.

The scowling demon of the Gaels will desert his role of skirting the ends and slashing the tackles almost totally for a new task.

He's going to ram his large head and mighty shoulders into the Hanley-Kerr forward wall between tackle and tackle.

And he's going to clear a path for Cotton Warburton, the blond-headed kid who made the "kiddy kar" famous.

At Berkeley, Andy Kerr, still nursing a cold, got up off his bed and toddled out to help his co-coach, Dick Hanley, with the chores.

The wily Scot of Colgate was feeling improved. But he is still far from well.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 27 (US)—A drizzling rain slowed up but did not prevent either Tulane or Temple from indulging in a brisk practice for their Sugar Bowl game here on New Year's Day.

In Baton Rouge, working out on Louisiana State University's practice field, "Pop" Warner sent his Temple squad through a fast dummy scrimmage.

Offensive plays, featuring the razzle dazzle for which Warner is justly famous, were stressed. The dummy scrimmage followed a lengthy chalk talk, with "Pop" doing the talking.

The only bad news from the Temple camp came in a physician's report that Joseph Stanik, veteran halfback, would not be able to start.

In New Orleans, Coach Ted Cox had his Tulanians out on the practice field for but a short time. The remainder of the session consisted of chalk talk.

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 27—Bobby Grayson and James "Monk" Moscrip, fullback and end respectively, of the Stanford football eleven will be in the starting line-up when Stanford faces the Alabama Crimson Tide, New Year's Day here.

Grayson's torn cartilages have healed to the extent he is able to toss passes, although with some effort. Moscrip's injured knee has mended.

The Stanford gridsters arrived here this morning from Palo Alto and Coach Claude "Tiny" Thornhill will send his Redskins through a warming up drill this afternoon.

Thornhill wouldn't predict a Stanford victory.

"We will be in there trying, that's all," he said. "My hope is all of our injured and ailing players will be in condition for the game."

Two Records

By Davis, Koenecke

Len Koenecke, Brooklyn centerfielder, and Curt Davis, Philadelphia pitcher, established new fielding records for the National League during the 1934 season, according to official statistics just released.

Koenecke's two errors in a total of 318 chances gave him a fielding average of .994, the best yet recorded for an outfielder in this league. The previous record was .993, held jointly by Lew Duncan of the 1923 Cincinnati Reds and Wally Berger of the 1932 Boston Braves.

Davis's record consisted in taking part in 12 double plays during the season. The best mark heretofore in this specialty was credited to Burleigh Grimes, who participated in 11 such plays while a member of the 1922 Brooklyn Robins.

Jail For Chuckers

The public is solidly behind General Manager George V. Brown of the Garden-Arena combine in his plan to jail all persons who throw bottles, bolts, electric light bulbs and other objects at contestants, officials and spectators.

Brown will have special police stationed in the Garden and in the Arena.

It is time that these disgraceful practices at hockey games and wrestling matches were halted.

CARLOADINGS REPORT IS CHEERFUL

By HUGH F. BRADSHAW

[illegible]

J. F. T. O'Connor

[illegible] cheerful traffic reports through January and February.

Bits o' Gossip: The decision of J. F. T. O'Connor not to leave his post as Comptroller of the Currency may not make the politicians happy . . . But there is a banker or two who is happy because he is considered one of the more conservative New Dealers . . . And with Carter Glass bombarding the Federal Reserve Board with charges of usurption of power in the bank interest reduction Mr. O'Connor's refusal to move will help sentiment . . . For no matter what they say bankers are none too sure that they have definitely sailed into calmer waters . . . So far as Federal supervision and regulation is concerned.

The new low closing for the utilities on most of the popular averages has hurt bullish sentiment somewhat. This was to be expected but in the event the other two averages [illegible] above the [illegible] of last week there is no reason for [illegible] stocks. In fact as we have [illegible] said, we [illegible] under such levels for the [illegible] trials [illegible] and they are ready entitled to move about anywhere between the lows of early fall and the highs of December.

* * *

Chart Chatter: Consolidated Gas is once again proving itself an ideal stock for the technicians and seems determined to slide off to the 16 level . . . Sudden rallies in the issue should be used for liquidation still . . . It will be a terrible blow if the rails do not make good on the upside . . . For almost without exception the better issues have built solid-looking bases usually followed by lengthy rallies . . . And a lot of the chartists have made their bets that way.

One [illegible] for the cheer regarding [illegible] heavy industries [illegible] two years sharp ups [illegible] have been witnessed but they proved fleeting and the heavy industries slipped off [illegible] Next year the forecasters [illegible] turn [illegible] year, while the fall [illegible] ment exceeding that of the spring. Thus the year's average will be good and earnings will feature pleasant stability.

Briefs: Tax selling has been in somewhat larger volume than many anticipated . . . Especially when the record for 1934 markets is scanned . . . It may result from loss acceptance by those who have been holding shares for some years who see their last chance to make deductions . . . Big question concerning 1935 in our mind is what will happen to the big shot traders of yesteryear . . . They have failed so far to find a way around the securities laws.

Utilities face the beginning of 1935 with at least a low price level in their favor.

And unless they are forced out of business entirely, they shouldn't be worse off market-wise when 1936 rolls around than they are now . . . The stepping up of auto production is beginning to have a sentimental influence on the accessories.

It would not be surprising if [illegible] agree on few things except the avoidance of high priced industrials [illegible] are very anxious to double where as low or medium-priced issues can do this easily in a bull swing lasting a few months . . .

These November earnings reports and the prospect that December will be as poor explain the grogginess of the rails.

Even here, however, there is apparently selective buying in the stronger systems.

FINANCING IS EXPLAINED BY HANEY

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics, New York University

New York, Dec. 27.—I am asked [illegible]

"Just how do government bond issues work—where do the borrowed funds come from, and where do they go?"

W[illegible] decides to let Mr. Ickes spend a billion or two for something or other. Mr. Morgenthau says there are no funds available in the Treasury. Then there are two things Mr. Ickes can do. He can get the Treasury to borrow the billions, or he can get the Treasury to print him up some greenbacks.

So it is decided to borrow.

Now we are off on an operation in government high finance. Watch it closely, for the closer you watch, the less you will see.

There are two ways for a government [illegible] bonds [illegible] them with [illegible] a $1000 bond [illegible] gives his check in payment, and holds the bond as an investment. The check is drawn on the [illegible] inflation necessarily involved.

But few investors will now buy such bonds, so it resorts to a process of floating its paper with the banks over which it has control. This means that it swaps its debt (bonds, notes, bills, etc.), for the banks' debt (deposit credit).

It can do this in two days:

(1) It can go to its controlled Federal Reserve Banks and order them to take billion dollars in government paper. They have little to lend except other government paper, so Mr. Morgenthau says:

"Just give your Uncle Sam a deposit credit on the books."

So that is arranged.

Then Mr. Morgenthau fixes it so that Mr. Ickes can have checks drawn on this account. Mr. Ickes sends the checks down to the Tennessee Valley.

There they may be spent for electric refrigerators [illegible] finally get deposited in [illegible] member banks. Thus member bank deposits are [illegible]

[illegible] banks. But the deposited "checks" are sent back to the reserve bank on which drawn, and build up the "reserve balances" of the member banks. (These being about 90 per cent above the legal 10 per cent reserve requirement, mean large excess reserves.)

(2)—Now if Mr. Hopkins wants a billion, the member banks may be asked to use these "excess reserves" (created out of government paper as above) to swap for the new government paper. Then Bank A buys some bonds. The government spends the funds thus obtained. The funds are deposited in Bank B. Bank B deposits 10 per cent of these as a reserve in the reserve bank, and has 90 per cent left to buy some bonds with. And so on for Banks C, D, etc.—a merry circle of credit inflation.

Or the member banks may do the initial debt swapping with the government without drawing on their "excess reserves." Say the Farm Relief Administration wants a billion. Mr. Morgenthau this time arranges a new deal with the commercial banks. The banks lend their credit, that is, they "pay" for the government paper by pretending that the government has made a "deposit" which it can draw checks on, just as the reserve banks did for Mr. Ickes.

This the farm relief spending branch quickly does. The government's checks go out to the non-cotton growers. They buy automobiles with the checks. The checks are deposited with the banks, eventually getting back to the same banks that "bought" the "bonds" on which the checks were based.

Since business uncertainties and restrictions keep business men from borrowing, these "reserves," if used at all, are put into more government paper.

Then the government spends. The ex-farmers and the relief workers buy automobiles, etc. The bank deposits increase again.

Thus "purchasing power" is "created." The bigger the public debt, the larger the bank credit ("deposits" and "investment in government securities"). But such bank credit does not circulate or stay [illegible] deposits [illegible] excess [illegible] waiting for Messrs. Ickes and Hopkins to spend it. It is offset by government debt.

So [illegible] inflation.

BOND MARKET IS STEADY

By Associated Press

New York, Dec. 27—Prices held steady in bond trading, with a better tone apparent in the utility section. Rails moved narrowly in either direction, while most industrial issues were about even.

Utility company bonds showed modest gains after the declines of recent sessions included American & Foreign Power 5s at 54¾, International Telephone 5s at 63¼, and American Telephone 5s at 111, Consolidated Gas [illegible] Gas 5s and North American 5s ruled around yesterday's closing levels.

Among the rails Atchison 4s lost nearly a point on fair volume at 100, but most of the group was little changed from the previous close. Pennsylvania General 4½s were a shade easier at 105¼.

Among industrial liens Bethlehem Steel 5s at 106¼ and Shell Union Oil 5s at 102¾ were firmer. Obligations holding about even included Goodyear 5s, National Dairy 5¼s, Standard Oil of New York 4½s and Chile Copper 5s. United Drug gts at 89½ and Youngstown Sheet & Tube 5s were small fractions lower.

First Liberty 4¼s gained slightly as did several other federal issues. Foreign bonds were generally featureless, but Italy 7s and Poland 7s showed fractional firmness.

Finds Business Outlook Is Best In Three Years

New York, Dec. 27.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Company of New York currently comments as follows:

The new year will open with the outlook for business relatively the most favorable since 1931. Confidence has definitely improved during the past several months, business men and government officials are manifesting a greater co-operative spirit.

The labor problem, although far from solved, is showing signs of clarifying. Inflation fears have been allayed for the present. Earlier apprehension that the profit incentive was threatened has been largely removed, and the administration's plans and objectives are more clearly defined than at any time since the inception of the New Deal.

This should not be construed as a forecast of a sharp upturn in industrial activity during early future months. Too many uncertainties still exist, particularly with respect to government spending, the budget, taxes and the threat of radical legislation at the coming session of Congress to warrant the conclusion that a recovery of more than moderate proportions will be witnessed.

In the main, however, there is basis for tempered optimism. Business now has largely adjusted itself to the increased costs and other changes necessitated by the New Deal. Moreover, the foundation for a substantial revival of activity has been established as a result of the tremendous amount of replacement demand which has accumulated during the depression.

Thus, business is in a position to forge ahead. Much depends upon the future policies of the government, particularly in its efforts to stimulate the flow of private credit. Prospects that the administration will follow more conservative lines in attempting to solve the major problems with which it is faced provide definite encouragement.

Cotton Higher in New York Trading

New York, Dec. 27 (INS)—In generally quiet dealings, cotton futures today recovered a few points of yesterday's 3-to-9 point setback, sentiment being aided by a firm tone at Liverpool where equivalents were well above due prices.

Midday quotations were unchanged to 3 points higher, with March up 2 at 12.59; May unchanged at 12.66; July up 3 at 12.70; October up 1 at 12.54, and December 1935 unchanged at 12.61.

Bank Clearings

New York, Dec. 27 (AP)—Bank clearings in the principal cities of the United States during the week ended Dec. 26 totalled $3,993,843,000, an increase of 13.8 per cent from the $3,551,353,000 reported in the same week last year, according to Dun & Bradstreet.

SEES RECOVERY CHECKED BY DELUSIONS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service

New York, Dec. 27—The recovery movement in the United States was set back about a year by delusions spread in connection with the NRA ballyhoo.

Beneficial trade expanding elimination of price disparities which had been under way between February and July, 1933, was halted by the untimely raising of industrial costs and prices. Referring to the effects of the NRA in delaying recovery, a recent survey by the National Bureau of Economic Research reveals:

"This (recent) improvement is significantly in contrast to the definitely retrogressive tendencies prevailing from July to October, 1933. The general enforcement of new industrial codes during the third quarter of 1933, combined with a swing back from the sharp advance of the preceding quarter, served to widen relative price differences, raising costs which were already high and depressing prices already low."

Yet advocates of the NRA point to the adding of 4,000,000 to payrolls.

Even this claim is a snare and a delusion.

It represented nothing more than a share-the-work movement.

It represented no corresponding increase in productivity or in the number of man-hours gainfully employed.

This is graphically set forth in recent studies of the National Industrial Conference Board, which showed that man-hours were at a peak when the NRA got under way in the midsummer of 1933, and that while the NRA drive was being launched, there was a persistent decline in man-hours employed and in aggregate production which continued until the end of the year. At the beginning of the fall of 1934, indices of man hours and of production were substantially lower than at the time the NRA campaign was initiated.

Accordingly, as an instrument of recovery the NRA proved a dud.

The NRA proved to be social legislation, rather than lifting the machinery to effectuate recovery.

Economists and statisticians, gathered at Chicago for the 47th annual meeting of the American Economic Association, heard optimistic words from William F. Ogburn of the University of Chicago, concerning future progress in inventions and in economic efficiency.

"For the future," he concluded, "there is no particular reason to think that the technological and scientific changes will slow up. We may, perhaps, be able to speed up the other institutions slightly more quickly, due to the rapid development of communication."

The increase in inheritance taxes and the decrease in exemptions, brought about by the Revenue Act of 1934, will result in a greater shrinkage in the assets of estates at the time of settlement than ever before. UTILITIES ARE FIRM NEAR CLOSE

New York, Dec. 27—A better tone in the utility shares after a number of them had sagged to new lows during the forenoon was the outstanding feature of an irregular market today.

Consolidated Gas actually worked nearly a point higher in the face of a cut in the dividend to 25 cents a share quarterly from 50 cents previously. This was apparently due to short covering now that the news was out.

RAILS HEAVY

National Distillers was a strong spot on the declaration of a 50c. dividend. Johns Manville, Westinghouse and Pullman also were strong apparently reflecting the statement of Secretary of Commerce Roper that the heavy industries would improve next year.

In contrast to the strength in these divisions, the rails, food and oil shares were heavy and inclined to work lower.

In the rails, New York Central, New Haven and Chicago & Northwestern were offered in moderate amounts. The selling here was apparently due to the comparatively unfavorable November earnings reports.

Industrials and motors were strong under the leadership of United States Steel, Chrysler and General Motors.

Oils were heavy, with Texas Corporation, Socony Vacuum and other favorites lower. Standard Brands, Corn Products and National Dairy were weak spots in the food shares group.

TAX SELLING

This was the last day for regular stock sales to establish income tax losses and considerable activity in the utilities and other groups hovering around their lows was attributed to these transactions. Tomorrow, Saturday and Monday tax selling will have to be conducted on a cash basis. Some selling today to record profits in issues now near their best levels for the year were also reported.

Market commentators were hopeful that relief from tax selling, coupled with January re-investment demands, would bring substantial improvement in the list after the start of the new year.

It was pointed out that there have been only three occasions since 1920 in which stocks, as measured by the averages, have failed to finish higher on the first trading year of the new year than the close of the session preceding the Christmas holiday.

With the President working on his initial message to Congress, the financial district was attaching much importance to the governmental plans that may be revealed to the legislators.

Many traders were inclined to hold off commitments pending the reading of the presidential address.

Thomas E. Bragg Is Bullish on Stocks

Los Angeles, Dec. 27 (INS)—America's bear market operator No. 1 has turned bull!

Thomas E. Bragg, reputed to have made a fortune riding the market down during four years of the depression, now visiting in Los Angeles, today declared himself "bullish on stock prices."

However, the premier bear operator does not expect any speculative market in the near future.

"It looks like an 'investment market' for some time to come," he said.

General conditions—not the Securities and Exchange Act—are responsible for the market's lethargy, he said.

'We are getting off to a running start and general business should be greatly improved during the next year," he said.

Provincial Bank of Canada Ends Year

Province Bank of Canada for fiscal year ended Nov. 30, 1934, reports profit of $417,366, against $410,654 the year before. After dividends, taxes, provision for bank premises and contingent reserve, there was a deficit of $14,334 for the year and surplus account in the balance sheet stood at $285,740.

Total assets at $46,799,883 showed a gain of nearly $1,500,000 over the previous year. Quick assets were 70 per cent of liabilities to the public.

Governors of the New York Stock Exchange denied the petition to close the exchange on New Year's eve, December 31.

'Poison' of Relatives

Wife in Custody

Helen and Kirk Try to Solve Marriage Tangle

by BEATRICE LUBITZ

CHAPTER XXXV

Dirk found Helen browned by the hot tropical sun and looking more beautiful than he had ever seen her. He told her so. She pressed his hand gratefully.

"Dirk, it was good of you to come. I never dreamed you would. Oh, you are so good!"

"Listen, young woman, I'm not going to sit by and see you wreck your life, get me? You love Walter, don't you?"

"Yes, yes."

"Then we've got to put our heads together. Now first let me get into a cool suit. Then a long cool drink and then we'll talk."

Two hours later they sat in her green-and-white sitting room. Dirk, in a white linen suit, looked cool and comfortable.

"All right, Helen, shoot," he said gravely. "Tell me everything. I promise you I won't interrupt. I know pretty much what you're up against but there must be another way besides leaving Walter. It's cruel to you both. I can't help thinking it's like amputating the hand because the finger is festering. All right, now, tell me. I'll keep my opinion to myself until you've finished." He opened his cigarette case and carefully chose one. Under cover of lighting it, he studied her carefully. "Come, we'll walk on the boardwalk in the sun. The sun makes everything so much brighter."

STAMPED ON MEMORY

Helen laughed. "Wait, I'll get a hat."

They walked slowly arm in arm along the boardwalk, engrossed in conversation. As they talked, Dirk was conscious of her beauty; how she blended into the richly colored tropical scene; the emerald-green sea, the dazzling sand. Helen's ash-blonde hair, her warm skin, her slim, supple form—they were all indelibly stamped on his memory. He would always associate her and this lovely scene. He brought himself to the problem at hand with an effort. He wanted to help her. He had come down to help her . . .

"Helen, family interference has shattered more marriages than immorality and infidelity and drink put together. Sometimes even well-meaning relatives can poison the lives of two persons." He drew a deep breath, wondered if he sounded as pedantic to her as he did to himself, but he went firmly on. "Walter isn't entirely to blame."

"No?" she asked huskily. "Hasn't he listened and abetted and been influenced by them? If he truly loved me, he wouldn't even let them discuss me."

"Theoretically you're right, but actually families seem to think they have a divine right. It's perfectly easy to shut up well-meaning friends but not so easy to shut up a mother or sister. Walter is a peculiar fellow, absolutely the victim of circumstances. He has an idea his sisters have made him."

BUILDING PALACES

They swung along together in step. Dirk clenched her arm but went on calmly.

"You see, my dear, the war and the unusual prosperity of the last six years since the war have put into the heads of people without cultural background a lot of money and power which they never had before in their whole history and which they know neither how to use nor how to enjoy. Not one of them knows how to adjust himself to life, not even Walter. There are thousands of such people. Lists of millionaires contain hundreds of new names, men who amassed fortunes during the war. They are quite dreadful. They are building magnificent palaces in the worst possible taste along the ocean front here and everywhere else, filling them with things and more things. Things dominate their lives, fill their minds, become their Deity and the result—a restless, dissatisfied people, without tradition, without understanding and without charm." He laughed "But we're roaming far afield from your problem."

"My little problem seems curiously unimportant when placed against that broader horizon," said Helen.

Dirk grinned. "That's fine. That, I believe, is called perspective. But to come back. At least give Walter a chance. You can't just walk out on him like this. It isn't sportsmanlike and will only bring unhappiness to you both. You've been here nearly a week. Your brow must certainly have been cooled a little. Wire for him. Get him here. Get him away from those women! Walk with him along this lovely waterfront and put the facts up to him clearly and without heat. Remember what we said about poise? Don't weaken, don't compromise. God and right are on your side. Give him an ultimatum if necessary. You know: either—or! Walter has a lot of his mother's good horse sense and he loves you. I think you'll both be happier for it and if you can save your marriage, isn't it worth it?"

"YOU'RE SO WONDERFUL"

Her eyes were shining. "Oh, Dirk, you're so wonderful. You make everything so clear, so limpidly clear, so . . . simple. I'll wire him tomorrow so that he can be here over the week-end. I'll do everything you say. I'll ask him to choose once and for all whether it's I or the Rileys. Oh, Dirk, I love him so. I can give him so much," she whispered. "He can make me so happy, too. I want him so!"

Dirk's eyes clouded, but he smiled. "Good girl, Helen!"

She stopped impulsively to face him. "And you, Dirk? What about you? Are you happier?"

He smiled at her tenderly. "I'm a man, Nellie. It's easier for men than for women to adjust themselves. I'm all right. Don't worry about me. I have an extremely elastic backbone. I bend easily but I don't break. I'm all right."

"Im so glad, Dirk. But is it enough?"

"I've got to make the best of it. I loathe divorce; besides, I have no real grounds. There's the boy now—and I have many things to interest me."

She pressed his arm and they walked for a while in silence, each thinking his own thoughts. A steady stream of gaily dressed, laughing people flowed along the boardwalk going in the opposite direction. Suddenly two persons detached themselves from the crowd and stood staring at them. Helen looked up suddenly to meet two hostile pairs of eyes, but since she didn't know them, she continued her walk which fitted so rhythmically with Dirk's.

"Did you see that couple, Dirk, the way they stared at us?"

"Yes, do you know them?"

"I never laid eyes on them before."

"Maybe they were bowled over with your beauty," grinned Dirk.

CONCILIATION MOVE

Helen laughed. "Oh, Dirk. Look, there's Fredericks and baby. Oh, yoohoo!" Helen called gaily. "Come on, Dirk, we can crawl over this rail. Gracie's going to get a bath. Let's watch. Oh, how darling she looks! Gracie, Gracie!"

Later at dinner Helen said: "Shall I tell Walter you were here?"

"If you like. But don't you think he'd be better pleased if he thought the conciliation move came from you alone?"

"Yes, I suppose he would."

"Then use your judgment, Nell. Either way is all right."

"Did you tell Irene you were coming down to talk to me?"

"No, I just said I was called South. Irene, and I don't tell each other much these days."

"Do you think she'd mind?"

"I doubt it. Irene has superb self-confidence. Jealousy, like simplicity, plays no part in her makeup."

"I shouldn't want you to get into any difficulties over me."

He laughed heartily. "Why, you old-fashioned little Puritan. What possible difficulties could there be? We aren't even stopping at the same hotel and we've spent this whole day in Florida's much advertised great outdoors. I shall leave early in the morning. As a matter of fact, you can get your telegram off to Walter tonight. That will date our strictly moral day together so that even the most putrid-minded will be convinced."

Helen sent Walter a night letter at the apartment and at the moment he read it, Dirk was boarding the train New York bound. Helen in a white flannel suit and low white shoes saw him off. She waved her white felt hat until the train was out of sight. His last glimpse of her was her smiling tanned face, with its halo of ash-blonde hair that caught the sun and reflected its rays like a pool reflects the sunlight. She was so slim, so young, so hopeful as she danced up and down. He felt his heart contract at her loveliness.

"PACK MY BAG"

He drew a deep sigh. "What a waste," he thought sadly. "What a waste of love and loveliness . . and yet she loves him!"

Walter opened Helen's telegram with his butter knife. Mamie in the kitchen was suddenly surprised to hear him laugh loudly and gaily.

"Mamie, Ma—mie," he called, "pack my bag, quick. Throw in some shirts and stuff. Did my Summer suit come back from the tailor's? Swell! Fire it in. And socks and white shoes. And my bathing suit and my tennis racquet. Mrs. Riley's too. She forgot hers . . I know . . . better use the double bag. I'll do some phoning. Never mind breakfast! The deuce with breakfast. I'm going South!"

She met his train. He saw her on the platform. He wanted to leap off but the porter stood in front of him and blocked his way with a stool. She was in white and she looked cool and slim and curiously virginal.

He was going to clasp her in his arms, smother her with kisses . . . Nothing would ever separate them again!

He found himself shaking hands with her shyly. "Hello, my darling!"

"Hello, Walter. I'm so glad you could come."

"I took the first train out. Boy, did I rush! I brought you your tennis racquet and your beach robe. You forgot them."

"I bought others. But thanks a lot just the same."

"You look wonderful, Helen."

"How long can you stay, Walt?"

"How long can I stay? I'm going to stay with you forever and ever."

She smiled. "I mean here."

"As long as you like. All Winter." He took her arm. "Come on, Helen, let's go!"

"I want to talk to you, Walt."

"We have hours and hours. Do you realize it? This is our long deferred honeymoon. This is the first time we've ever been away together. Darling, I'm ready to listen. I'm so happy that you sent for me. I've been sick with remorse and loneliness. I want to make you happy. I'll do anything you say."

"All right. Then I say first get into a light suit and we'll have lunch and then we'll go to the beach. Gracie goes into the water every day. She looks marvelous, Walter. You won't know her. She's a little pickaninny."

"Really!"

"You've no idea how black she is."

"Say, that's wonderful. Cold all gone?"

"Oh, entirely."

"Gee, I'm tickled. How's Fredericks?"

"Fine. She's met a couple of nurses around the hotel who play bridge."

"That's great. I brought her a leather bridge set. Cards and scoring pads and pencils, neatly embalmed in cowhide."

They both burst out laughing.

"Oh, Walter, how thoughtful."

"I brought you something, too."

"What is it?"

"Surprise."

"You've got to tell me."

"Wait till I unpack. You'll like it, I think. I picked it out myself."

She smiled. "Then I'll surely like it!"

Sing Wacht Am Rhine in The Hudson

By Associated Press

New York, Dec. 27—The strains of "Der Wacht Am Rhine" floated out over the Hudson early today as the Deutschland made her way down the river, carrying 300 German-Americans to vote in the Saar.

Before boarding ship, they marched around the pier with a 30-piece band of Steel Helmets, clad in the field gray German army uniform.

At the head of the procession were the Stars and Stripes, the German national colors, the Nazi Swastika and the imperial ensign. As the Swastika passed spectators raised their arms in the Hitler salute.

The delegation is the last of three, totaling 700, to go from this country to take part in the election.

About 25 per cent are American citizens.

Saar Frontier Closed Till After Plebiscite

Undesirables and the curious will be barred from entering the wealthy little territory until January 26. Only persons who can prove they have urgent business here, or are merely traveling through, will be allowed to enter.

This Ear--That Air

By N. F. T.

Talk hasn't subsided much since listeners around and about sat by while Alexander Woolcott, the wordy gentleman of many moods and all manner of worldly experiences, mastered the ceremonies through that three hours of a broadcasting big time on Christmas afternoon. Apparently everyone is of the opinion that Alex did perform thoroughly in keeping with the label attached to him. Verily, where words require putting together to make soothing sense, he is quite the colorful Major Domo.

On the other five fingered appendage, the self same Mr. Woolcott won't find his spread as broad as heretofore during 1935 just ahead. At least it doesn't seem likely from this observation point. Loudspeaker patrons aplenty are of a similar opinion. Bear in mind, they have placed Woolcott in a new time spot, namely 7 o'clock on Sunday evenings. There he is lined up in direct air audience competition with Jack Benny. Who is the more entertaining doesn't exactly constitute a basis for conjecture as to whether or not Woolcott will hold his coast to coast following. However, it is logical to assume that folks who have held fast to him as a 9 o'clock headliner, have been ardent Jack Benny fans as well. Now what? Well, for one, this lover of a lusty laugh doesn't by any means relish the prospect of foregoing either Alex or Jack. Certainly it isn't going to be any cinch breaking out as opposition to the Benny "mike" technique. By Jingo, that goes for anybody. It's perhaps the signal for going back to the old eenie-meenie-miney-mo manner of picking. If so, let's put some raspberry tinted emphasis on that MEENIE for shifting Woolcott from a place where he had things all his own way.

"N. F. T."

Speaking of cinches, as a few lines above did in passing, it further filters through this retrospective mind at the minute, that Mr. Will Rogers might take himself into conference and cook up something snappier than he contributed last Sunday evening. Will is actually a wit by nature and the vast armchair army of America should never hear him, except at his best. Meaning for his sake. As stated, broadcasting comedy is no cinch, yet somehow it should be for Will if he makes up his mind to make customers chuckle. All of which might provide the nucleus of a Rogers resolution for 1935 . . . Ed Wynn certainly is holding up his humor standard. In fact, he's elevated it considerably these last few months. Even so, slapping a sudden kibosh on his kidding Graham about the product isn't pleasing him a little bit. Reports reaching the colyum here from those in the know, indicate the "Fire Chief" is pretty well burned up over the proposition of putting a check-rein on his ribbing style . . .

VALLEE Introducing SKINNER

DAUGHTER AND ACTOR ON AIR

DIXIE MELODY ABOARD RADIO 'SHOWBOAT'

By THE EARCUPPER

In the light of a long and brilliant stage career, the actor, Otis Skinner, rather rates top billing among the Rudy Vallee galaxy of guests (WEEI) this evening, when that usual Thursday night, 8 to 9 o'clock hour comes across. Rudy relays his varieties while folks are relaxing from the high excitement of the merry Yuletide and awaiting more celebrations that are heading in for observance with the turn of the year. Cornelia Skinner, beauteous daughter of an illustrious Dad, appears with her father, and incidentally does so for the first time in a professional way.

Drama will be the vehicle for Otis and Cornelia. Their inherent talents are co-ordinating in the presentation of "Alexander's Horse," a whimsical one-act air sketch. In addition, Cornelia Otis Skinner has in mind to contribute one of her characteristic monologues, these having registered in exceptionally high favor as previous Vallee program highlights. Blossom Seeley and Benny Fields, novelty specialists heard during Rudy broadcasts long gone by, return to the studio spotlight. Then there's Tom Howard, comedy fast talker for all of his fumbly-jumbly style, also in the personality lineup again.

SOUTH[illegible]TING

Paul Whiteman and his music men go South for a main broadcasting theme tonight (WEEI) come 10 o'clock, the melodies to be wafted having very definite Dixie flavors. Such songs as "Oh Susannah," the traditional "Old Black Joe" and the favorite folk song "Way Down Upon the Swanee River," are to be interpreted by quartet and vocal ensemble voices.

Allyn B. McIntyre, forceful young business executive, recently elected president of the Association of National Advertisers, and vice-president of the Pepperell Manufacturing Company, headed New York way from New England to be a special speaker with Edwin C. Hill, holding forth from coast to coast as a "Forum of Liberty" spokesman (WNAC) tonight at 8:30 p. m.

Opera lovers will no doubt wish to be twisting toward the WMEX wave when it's 9:15 this evening. A condensed version of Verdi's classic opera "La Traviata" is on the slate, starring Santa Bionda of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

SECRET AGENT STAR

Tonight's the night (WAAB) for Secret Agents to tune in, the regular Tuesday evening being switched to Thursday night, because of the Christmas holiday. It is at the same 6:30 period and the talented Mary Stanley of Quincy is the guest artist. Mary returns to the program by admirer demand and promises to sing a group of the latest most popular and peppy tunes.

MIXED "MIKE" MENU

Diversion of the so-called higher order, meaning the operatic offerings, is scheduled through the WBZ-WBZA channels as well, when a goodly portion of the 7:15 to 7:45 half hour tonight is given over to "Pagliacci" or the prologue therefrom. Other selections will be the works of Bach and Rimsky-Korsakoff. However, the period is to conclude with good old American semi-classic compositions, the best after all.

BIRDMEN Ready for BIG 'HOP'

83 IN MODEL PLANE DERBY

The final entry list shows 83 Junior Birdmen and Birdwomen have entered the big New England indoor model plane derby to be held at South Armory Saturday to decide the championship of the Boston wing.

It will be the first indoor tournament staged by this organization, which was established only last April and now has a national membership of more than 150,000 boys and girls and nearly 14,000 in New England.

The high point scorer will be declared champion of New England and will receive a silver trophy surmounted by a miniature airplane and a free trip to Detroit to compete against 17 other wing champions in the national derby during Easter vacation week.

Pope's Anti-Military Talk Stirs Wonder In All Italy

By Universal Service

Rome, Dec. 27—Church and state were in sharp disagreement here as citizens buzzed excitedly over the Pope's address to the College of Cardinals Monday, and more especially over Christmas sermons in principal churches which seemed directed at Premier Mussolini's program of militarism.

In his Christmas Eve address, Pope Pius XI said the church approved of arming for war to preserve peace, if that were the real purpose of arming countries. But he warned that the wrath of Heaven would have to be invoked for those who armed for war on the mere pretext their aim was peace.

Numerous priests in the large churches went even further in their Christmas sermons. One of the most important, typical of the rest, said:

"Read back over history, and you will see that every country which armed for war got either war or revolution."

All this is in direct opposition to Premier Mussolini's program for militarizing Italy, beginning with the training of six-year-old boys.

Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper, carried on its front page an article on the Pope's speech. It stressed that the Pope did not bless unrestrained arming, even in the name of peace. It said:

"The Pope appealed to men of good will in the interests of peace. Who are these men of good will? President Roosevelt last year spoke as a Christian to Christians."

HOME 'BOSS' QUARREL ENDS IN DEATH

Los Angeles, Dec. 27 — Death ended what police reports described as a quarrel between two young brothers over which was to be "boss" of their house.

The victim, fatally wounded with a charge from a shotgun, was Edgar Apple, 19.

Police said his brother, Ivan Apple, 17, walked into the police station and said:

"What do you do with people who murder somebody? I just shot my brother.

"Since Christmas a year ago we argued about who was going to be boss in the house. Finally I couldn't stand it any longer, so I just went and got my father's shotgun."

1934

What's the most famous "quartet" song?

Don't guess, we'll tell you! It's "Sweet Adeline." Now you may see it on the screens of the famous Paramount and Fenway Theaters where "Sweet Adeline," Warner Brothers' latest hit musical comedy, featuring three of today's "About Faces" stars, is now playing. The co-feature is "I'll Fix It," starring Jack Holt and the remaining "About Face" Hollywood celebrity.

We know that you will have much fun at home and at the theater as you attempt to identify the above drawings. If you are successful, you may share in the $25 in weekly cash awards as offered by the Boston Evening American to its readers. Here's all you have to do:

After you have recognized today's cinema favorites as they appear at your favorite twin theaters, fill in their names in the squares beneath their drawings. These squares equal the number of letters in their names. Use the letters "O" and "U" as guides to correct solutions. When you have completed the entire week's solutions mail them to: The About Faces Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass.

If you haven't become "About Faces" conscious, yet— Begin NOW!

—O— The Communist Program of Class Warfare and World Revolution —O—

"THE dictatorship of the proletariat is nothing else than power based upon force and limited by nothing—by no kind of law and by absolutely no rule."
—LENIN, Complete Works, Vol. xviii, Page 361.

"THE American Communist Party must be improved and Bolshevised. For that end we must work in order to forge real revolutionary cadres and a real revolutionary leadership of the proletariat, capable of leading the many millions of the American working class toward the revolutionary class struggles."
STALIN, in address May 6, 1929.

"THE conquest of power by the proletariat is the VIOLENT ABOLITION of the power of the bourgeoisie, the DESTRUCTION of the MACHINERY of the capitalist state.

"We proclaim openly that our design can only be realized by the VIOLENT OVERTHROW of the ENTIRE TRADITIONAL social order."

[The above policies were formally adopted and promulgated as the Communist program by the Sixth Congress of the Kommintern of the Communists' Internationale, which was held in 1925 in Moscow.]

The Columbia 'Protest'

THE jitters which has gripped a few Columbia professors as they sense the indignation throughout the country against the use of school rooms to preach disrespect for the American form of government is a good sign!

IT IS THE TRUTH THAT HURTS!

And the panicky little group, who have signed a request to the McCormack-Dickstein committee to "investigate" this rising wave of denunciation, thinking thus to stop it, will find their work cut out for them.

These disturbed professors have grabbed the banner of "academic freedom" and tried to hoist it, claiming that the Hearst newspapers, by their crusade against the infiltration of our schools and colleges with Communistic teaching, are repressing the teacher's freedom.

NOTHING OF THE SORT!

THERE is no freedom, academic or otherwise, to sow disloyalty to our country in the minds of our youth.

There is no academic freedom which embraces the teaching of Communism or any other seditious doctrine aiming at the violent overthrow of the United States government.

The law has seen to that!

The dilemma of the Columbia professors is a question for the trustees of the university, who have its good name and reputation in their keeping, rather than for a committee of Congress.

But if the McCormack-Dickstein committee can find the time and opportunity, with their other heavy labors, to write a separate chapter on COMMUNISM AT COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY, we shall be grateful to it, in common with loyal Americans the nation over.

THE Hearst newspapers have diligently sought to bring the American people to a realization of what is being done in their midst by Communists and the dupes and tools of Communism, with subtle and insidious propaganda.

We have striven to collect and present the evidence of un-American activities wherever we have discovered it.

Much has been accomplished, but much remains to be done.

The co-operation of the McCormack-Dickstein committee in this patriotic labor would be welcome, together with such unwitting aid as part of the Columbia faculty has rendered by its action in the present instance.

EXPOSURE—PITILESS EXPOSURE—THE FULLEST AND MOST COMPLETE EXPOSURE, is the only way to combat secret and sinister propaganda—aimed at American principles and institutions, and the very EXISTENCE OF THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT ITSELF!

Easing of the Taxpayers' Burdens Is Necessary

MAYOR MANSFIELD, addressing the Twentieth Century Club, discussed the advisability of securing a sales tax here, along with an increase in income taxes.

This is the wrong idea. Economy, which the Mayor is quoted as saying has failed, must still be the slogan in city and town affairs.

It is the ONLY idea that has ever got us anywhere.

Seventeen States have sales taxes. Why then, it may be asked, should Massachusetts not have them?

One reason is that a State cannot tax goods in interstate commerce.

Accordingly, in a highly industrialized State, such as Massachusetts, with well industrialized neighbors, many persons will deliberately BUY OUTSIDE OF THE STATE to avoid the sales tax.

THE State sales tax, in effect, discriminates against the retailers of the enacting State.

To get the States out of this field of taxation, Congress should enact a Federal manufacturers' sales tax.

It should also withdraw, by agreement with the several States, from those fields of taxation which ought to be reserved to the States.

Competitive taxation between State and nation is growing dangerously.

Its abatement would contribute directly to an outstanding need—more economical government.

Oath for Teachers

Loyal Will Not Object

Lieutenant Ross H. Currier of the Sons of the American Revolution made known in a recent address in Boston that the S. A. R. and the American Legion are behind a bill to require all school teachers to take the oath of allegiance.

The incoming Legislature on Beacon Hill ought also to be solidly behind this measure.

Loyal teachers, well aware of the creeping poison of Communism, will NOT object to pledging anew devotion to "the Flag and the country for which it stands."

The proposed law will serve a practical purpose if it helps in any way to weed out Communism in Massachusetts.

Colleges Turn the Corner

Education has recovered.

College enrollment is now only slightly below that of the best pre-depression years.

There are five per cent more students this year than last, fourteen per cent more freshmen.

Nearly a million students in nearly 600 institutions!

When you are worried about America's future, think of that standing army!

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

GIVE YOURSELF!

Those poor, ragged devils drifting along the streets these days—clotting in dark huddles on the corners—shambling down back alleys — making furtive clutches at the restaurant garbage—

Elsie Robinson

How often, in desperate pity, you've said, "If I only had a million"—then turned away sick, feeling the risk of parting with even a dime!

If you had something to give! But you have. YOU CAN ALWAYS GIVE YOUSELF

There are crueler things than hunger in life today—burdens more bitter to bear than rags. There desperate remorse for old follies. The secret, gnawing fear of one's own cowardice. Humiliation that eats like cancer, at human pride. Old hurts. Old hunger, buried too deep for words. Old hates.

You couldn't help needs like that with money, even if you had it to give. But you have something that will help—YOU HAVE YOURSELF.

There's that poor devil who made such a fool of himself with drink. Threw away chance after chance. Now he's taking the count. Last night you saw him—pretended you hadn't. What was the use when you couldn't do anything?

YOU KNEW GRIEF

But you can do something. There's that chapter out of your own past . . . that time when you made such a fool of yourself, broke faith with your best friends, ran amuck.

Remember what a time you had coming back out of that—hating yourself, dodging your own shadow? And now that it's all behind you, you never mention it. No one, seeing you today, steady, respectable, would even dream it had ever happened.

You say you want to help that poor fool who's going through the same hell? You can—but not by sermons or threats or charity. GIVE HIM BACK HIS PRIDE BY BARING THAT OLD SCAR ON YOUR OWN.

Tell him you, too, were once a fool . . . a liar . . . a traitor to those who loved you. But you've come back—and so can he! Show him that scar and he'll believe you.

That desperate woman with the haunted eyes—you long to help her, too. A grave in those eyes—black tears in that heart—a dumb grief that's destroying her.

You once knew grief like that. That terrible night when you fought so desperately—only to see death mount in a gray and ruthless tide. Years ago, it was—but even the thought of it sets you shuddering.

"No—no—I can never mention that," you cry. "It hurts too awfully."

But what right have you to hoard your hurt as if it were a sacred, personal thing? Grief is the common lot. Hoard it—it will poison you. Share it—and you soothe not only her pain, but your own.

Open your heart! Show her that you, too, have known agony . . . Yet lived to laugh again.

Give! Give yourself. Hold nothing back . . . pour it all into those empty hands, those broken hearts. All the hoarded dreams that never came true. The high, hot hopes—the brave crusades that failed. Give them all!

Give them as you give bread and wine. They ARE bread and wine—part of that blessed communion which another poor man started long ago.

He, too, had "nothing to give." Homeless, penniless—keeping the Passover with his ragged friends in that shabby room—how could he heal the misery in their hearts? Out of his own hurt the answer came. There WAS something he could give.

"Eat!" He said—and broke the bread. "Drink" He whispered—and poured the wine. "This is My body—this is My blood—broken and spilled—for you! Eat—drink—and remember!"

Nothing to give—except Himself. Yet that broken gift has comforted the world!

Give—YOURSELF!

About Initial Carvers -:- -:- By Winifred Black

The man who sat next to me at dinner told me a rather nice, little story the other night.

I wonder if you've heard it? Here it is:

Winifred Black

"A party of tourists were taken to the house where the great composer lived and died.

"The tourists were shown the garden and the drawing room and the library and finally, as a last treat—the music room.

"In the corner of the music room stood a rather shabby old piano. The case looked as if it had not been polished for a long time, and the keys were not clear, white and shining black, but sort of yellowish and brownish black.

"A woman in the party stepped up to the piano before the guide could stop her.

OUT OF TUNE

" 'Be-lunge'— said the piano in rather a discordant voice.

"The woman had touched a minor chord and intended, evidently, to play a little, but the guide stopped her.

" 'Pardon, madam,' said the guide, 'it is not permitted.'

" 'Rather out of tune, isn't it?' said the woman tourist.

"The guide made a deep bow from the waist and raised shoulders in a deprecating shrug:

" 'I do not know, madam. I have never had the courage to lay one bold finger on those keys.' "

Would you have liked to be there so you could have seen the face of that woman tourist when the guide gave her this not too softly wrapped rebuke?

I wonder if she blushed a disconcerted scarlet or did she turn pale green with embarrassment?

And did she learn anything from the experience?

I don't believe she did.

People who do not know by instinct that a piano used by a great composer is almost a sacred thing are not people who learn very easily, do you think?

I know a great and beautiful palace by the sea where a great man entertains his friends. And in this palace is the bed of Cardinal Richelieu.

One of the guests confessed to me that he had all he could do to keep from cutting his own initials deep into the satiny wood.

I have never liked that man since he told me that.

What a strange form of meglomania it is that makes people want to make some personal contact with everything that is distinguished, and should be almost sacred.

Nothing in a landscape or in a room means much to them, unless they, by some hook or crook, can thrust their insignificant personalities into the picture or the story or the atmosphere.

No wonder the old piano screamed when the woman tourist dared to try to play one of her trivial tunes upon the sacred keys.

DOGS AND MEN

When dogs have nothing else to do
And whether it be night or day,
The thoroughbreds and mongrels, too,
Stretch out and sleep the time away.

Not having customs to obey
And certain hours which they must fill,
Dogs promptly put the world away.
When they have idle time to kill.

Beyond their strength they never go.
They're wise enough their rest to take.
To please some other dogs they know
They needn't keep themselves awake.

I watch my dog upon the floor,
Indifferent to our idle chat
And think, the while I hear him snore,
I wish that I could sleep like that.

WRITES ABOUT

World Absurdities

The late Count Witte was the product of a revolution. Not much of a revolution, but a revolution, nevertheless.

Hendrik Van Loon

The war with Japan had shown the ghastly chaos of the empire of the Czars. A small Asiatic nation had completely defeated the most powerful of all European states.

It had annihilated the Russian fleet, and the general who was supposed to defend Port Arthur till the last drop of blood had sold out to the enemy long before the last drop of vodka had been consumed.

Even the long-suffering Slavic soul began to show a certain impatience with the doings of the Little Father. There were riots in St. Petersburg which were suppressed in the usual idiotic fashion. And so there were more riots.

Until the Little Father discovered that even the blank cartridges of his own imperial artillery, firing a welcome salvo, could no longer be trusted (they were found to be loaded with shrapnel) and generously gave his people a constitution and a "reform government."

Count Witte was to be head of this New Deal. He was a methodical man and addicted to statistics. Nicholas II did not believe in statistics. Otherwise he might still be playing blind man's buff with his children in Tsarkoe Selo.

Now, while the excellent and methodical Witte was examining the national budget, he came upon a singular item. For the last fifty-four years, regularly once a year, the imperial household had been charged for an entire carload of birdseed.

Witte ordered an investigation. It appeared that in the year 1852 a certain Russian grand-duchess, a little German princess recently married to a cousin of the Czar, had brought her pet canary with her when she travelled to the banks of the Neva. And having exhausted the little creature's supply of birdseed, she had casually asked that they bring her a little box of fresh birdseed.

In the hands of a competent courtier, that demand for a little box has become a carload. And since all courts live by and for "precedent," that one load of birdseed had become an annual carload.

And in 1906 the imperial household was still paying several thousand rubles annually for a carload of birdseed that indubitably was dumped into the river just as soon as they reached the shores of the Baltic.

The world of course is full of such absurdities.

Truth of the matter is that in neither nature nor history is there such a thing as "always has been." I love to listen to preachers when they compare their faith to the strength of the "eternal mountains."

The highest of them all, the Himalayas, were not even visible 20,000,000 years ago, and will be as flat as our plains within another 40,000,000 years. And in matters of geography and geology, a million years are like a minute, while waiting for your best beloved to come down to dinner.

The receding coastline of eastern America will have swallowed up New York before another hundred thousand years.

We shall have to do a great deal of educating before the human race of the year 1934 shall be ready for the ideas of the year 2034.

While engaged upon this useful if difficult task, we shall come upon all sorts of obstacles. And the strongest of all those will be man's obstinate desire to live changelessly in an ever-changing world.

Human Side of the News

Story of the Tongs

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

The peace treaties of the Chinese tongs don't seem to stand wear and tear any better than the white man's Versailles Treaty.

Five years ago the New York tongs swore off war, with beautifully emblazoned peace placards up in public places. They had just finished their war-to-end-war, and there were feasts of brotherly love and invocations of peace and good will. There was a new era in Chinatown.

SHOOTING AGAIN

But once again, they're doing their shooting. Three Chinese restaurant workers in Suffolk street are called from their beds and swiftly dispatched. This seems to be an affair of the Tung On group, of which the slain men were members.

The police, as usual, are as baffled as a Florida hound chasing a mechanical rabbit. Don't be surprised if a tong gun shot in New York touches off another one in Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston or San Francisco. When tong war really gets going, there is nothing insular about it.

Something mysterious underground links these sinister guilds in many cities in unending blood feuds and from city to city runs the labyrinth of intrigue, conspiracy and, at times, death, ruthless and vengeful—a killing in New York, reprisal in San Francisco.

TONGS DIFFER

Any old time captain of detectives, who, perhaps, spent years on the Chinatown detail, will tell you that the tongs are merely the Chinese version of racketeering and nothing else. That the tongmen are, ordinary, every-day gangsters, organizing gambling and opium interests, setting up a balance of power, the disturbance of which starts a new war.

Those who have explored the history of the tongs say this isn't the whole story. Some of these "Benevolent Associations," have the character of modern trade guilds, and others are patently labor and capital organizations and their conflicts much like our trades union battles.

The Hoy On and the Ming Gai Hong are typical of the ancient clans, their origins lost in the darkness of history, strange and inexplicable to us.

The On Leong and Hip Sing tongs, which have had a serial shooting engagement for about 35 years, were formed in this country. It was they who staged the last murderous outbreak in New York in 1929.

There are about 40 tongs in America. Each big Chinatown has its own mayor, courts, judges, juries and schools.

Little can the white man learn of the yellow man's gods, his hatreds, his blood feuds, his treasons. But they hand a man a little "flower of death" and thereafter the world does not know him long. They fight over slave girls, opium, gambling and trade concessions, it is true, but still secret and inscrutable are their thoughts and deeds.

In a Chinese theater in San Francisco a few years ago, a great Chinese tragedian was chanting the legend of seven emperors in a high, shrill recitative. When he reached the fifth emperor, there were gun shots in the dark theater.

Five bodies rolled on the floor and five seats in a row were empty. The police came. The actor picked up his chant, with his audience still intent and unperturbed. Deep, hidden and linked with ancient and devious mysteries are the minds of the Chinese.
